My Three Years In Moscow

After Stalin Who? 3 Men Now In Line

By Lt.-Gen. Walter Bedell Smith

Installment 4

The most popular and continuous guessing game in Moscow and, indeed, in every foreign office around the world and in newspaper and magazine offices as well is, "After Stalin, Who?"

For the answer, of course, we must look to the Politburo, and especially to those men who, because of their background and personalities, and by the prominence accorded them in Communist party activities and in the Soviet press, seem to be closest to Stalin.

Of these Molotov is best known both inside and outside the Soviet Union. The Soviet Encyclopedia of 1943 describes him as the closest companion-in-arms of Stalin, but Pravda, on January 9, 1947, said exactly the same thing about Voroshilov. Certainly Molotov has, for more than 30 years, been one of Stalin's closest associates, and he is indebted to Stalin for his career.

In his book, "Stalin & Co.," Walter Duranty relates a story still current and accepted in Moscow. Stalin had suggested to Lenin that Molotov, as an old and trusted member of the party and one of the founders of Pravda, should be a member of the Central Committee of the party. Lenin squinted his tartar eyes and asked, "Why that one?" Stalin enumerated Molotov's services, and Lenin said: "Well if you like. But you know what I think of him—he's the best filing clerk in Russia."

If Lenin intended this remark in a disparaging sense, Molotov's services to the Soviet Union have demonstrated its inaccuracy.

Showed Ability

Molotov joined the Bolshevik faction of the Russian Social Democratic party in 1906. After the revolution he carried out with ability a succession of increasingly important party assignments until in 1926 he received the accolade of membership in the Politburo.

In December, 1930, he became chairman of the Council of People's Commissars, now the Council of Ministers, and occupied the office corresponding to Premier until Stalin himself took it over in 1941. He replaced Maxim M. Litvinov as Foreign Minister on May 3, 1939, and by foreigners he is always thought of in this capacity. But during the war he also was in charge of the all-powerful State Committee of Defense.

To me, Molotov's personality is unattractive. While he is always correct and courteous, he is repellingly colorless, and it seems impossible for him to be really at ease in the presence of foreigners. Even when attempting to be humorous, he appears stiff.

One Laugh

Only once have I heard him laugh without constraint. This was at a dinner at Spaso House during the Moscow conference of Foreign Ministers. At the opposite end of the long table Mr. Bevin and Mr. Molotov were sitting at the side of Mrs. Smith. Molotov drinking scotch and water with Bevin. As my wife told me afterwards, the two had been exchanging stories, via the interpreter. Mr. Bevin countered one of Mr. Molotov's with a very funny but very irreverent joke about Lenin, which sent Molotov into a gale of laughter.

Young Troyanovsky, the interpreter, was so shocked that he remarked stiffly in English to the British Foreign Minister: "In the Soviet Union we do not joke about Lenin."

In his dealings with representatives of other countries, Molotov has been systematically aggressive, stubborn and unyielding. In conferences he seems at times deliberately to bait and irritate his opponents. Yet the blandness with which he can execute a political somersault is remarkable, even for a Communist. His party statements about the United States have been particularly sarcastic and bitter. His stubbornness in negotiations justifies his party name (Molot means "hammer," his real name is Scriabin).

Pilots Killed

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—Two marine fighter planes collided in the air and plummeted into the sea during fleet exercises east of Hawaii Wednesday, killing both pilots, it was announced Wednesday night.

Truman Knows Of No More Atomic Blasts In Russia

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Truman said today that to his knowledge there have not been any more atomic explosions in Soviet Russia since the one he announced in late September.

He was asked at a news conference whether there had been additional atomic explosions in Russia. He replied there had not been, as far as he knew.

The President also expressed hope that this country's relations with Russia are improving.

This developed from questions about the present Big Three foreign ministers' conference in Paris.

Asked whether he thought the meeting would lead to better relations with Russia, the President said he could not say at this time.

"Well, are we getting anywhere with Russia?" a reporter asked.

The Chief Executive said he hoped so.

High Costs Blamed For Loss Sustained By Telegraph Firms

OTTAWA (BUP) — Canada's telegraph and cable companies today blamed higher operating costs, including wages, for leaving them in the red in 1948 for the first time in 31 years.

The companies, including the Canadian National, Canadian Pacific and their overseas connecting services, said higher costs of materials and pay raises for their employees set them back $20,292,000 during the year.

A Dominion Statistics Bureau report issued Wednesday said the telegraph and cable firms showed a deficit in 1948 for the first time since 1917. The report was based on information supplied by the firms.

It said the companies' gross revenues in 1948 reached a new record level for a 12-month period and jumped 5 per cent over the preceding year to hit a total of $19,423,000.

The report added, however, that the increase was offset by a 17 per cent boost in operating expenses. It left a deficit of $870,000 for 1948 compared with a credit of $1,155,000 in 1947.

Calls For Morning Sittings Of House

OTTAWA (BUP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent disclosed today that he will ask the Commons to start morning sittings next week, continuing until the end of the present session.

Mr. St. Laurent gave notice on the Commons order paper today of a motion to this effect. It proposed that on and after next Monday, Nov. 14, the House sit from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. each sitting day in addition to its present hours.

The motion does not, however, propose that the House sit on Wednesday evenings or on Saturdays.

Roomers May Have To Pay Boost Of Flat 20 Per Cent

OTTAWA (CP)—Maximum rental boosts which can be made on self-contained dwellings next month are 18 and 22 per cent of "existing ceiling-rentals," Owen Lobley, Canada's rental administrator, said today.

Tenants living in rooms can have their rents increased by a straight 20 per cent.

The administrator fixed these rates to prevent "pyramiding" of general cross-country boosts allowed by Finance Minister Abbott's announcement last Thursday increasing rents 20 and 25 per cent of pre-1948 levels.

The new increases will go into effect Dec. 15.

But most tenants won't start paying higher rents until Feb. 1, 1950. That is because tenants who rent on a monthly basis must be given a full month's notice of the increase.

Mr. Lobley said rental orders implementing the recent changes in the rentals regulations now have been completed. Copies will be available to the public in rental offices Nov. 18.

The 18 per cent increase applies to unheated self-contained dwellings; the 22 per cent increase to heated.

Defines 'Self Contained'

A self-contained dwelling is one in which the tenant has complete use of toilet facilities. If he had to share them with others than his household, then the "lodging" or a room.

In his statement, Mr. Lobley also announced:

1. Tenants who undertake to pay the increases must be given a new lease for at least 12 months. In no case can it terminate before May 1, 1951.

2. Tenants signing leases of two years and more cannot be evicted during the course of the lease to permit the landlord to sell the accommodation.

3. Landlords who owned accommodation before Nov. 1, 1949, must give the tenant six months' and want to recover possession notice to vacate. The accommodation cannot be sold before April 1, 1951.

4. Landlords who want to recover accommodation, will have to show a "genuine and demonstrable need." Otherwise they may encounter "legal difficulties" if the tenant refuses to vacate. The rule which prevents these types of vacating notives falling due in the winter has been lifted for the winter of 1950-51. It remains in effect for the winter of 1949-50.

5. Landlords who show "grievous financial hardships" will be permitted to regain possession of accommodation which they previously could not recover.

6. Houses erected by companies for use of their employees become free of rental controls.

7. The rental administrator will hear cases where landlords want to regain possession of property to expand commercial enterprises.

8. The rental boosts will see the end of "sundry allowances" previously made. These included local increases to meet higher taxes, renovations and property improvements.

Asked by reporters if he thought the removal of "sundry" allowances would discourage landlords from redecorating and maintaining property, Mr. Lobley said he believed it might discourage interior decoration but not outside repair and maintenance.

Plant Dismantling May Be Halted In German Industry

PARIS (AP)—The west's Big Three foreign ministers were reported today to have agreed that most dismantling of German industry should stop.

State Secretary Dean Acheson of the United States, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Britain and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France, also were said by informed sources to have moved closer toward allowing the new West German Republic to join the Council of Europe.

Conditions for discontinuing the dismantling of German plants had yet to be worked out in the Big Three talks that opened Wednesday. Britain still insists that such potential war industries as synthetic rubber and synthetic oil should be torn down, one source said.

The ministers reported "satisfactory progress" in Wednesday's talks and expected to wind up tonight or early tomorrow morning with a definite announcement of agreements.

Diplomatic sources said they had reached accord in principle, at least, on ways to give Western Germany an international voice for the first time since the war's end, possibly modifying the state of war which still exists between the western allies and the former enemy country.

Colombia Declares State Of Siege As Parties Fight

BOGOTA (AP) — Colombia's Conservative government has decreed a state of siege and suspended all sessions of the Liberal-dominated Congress in a move climaxing weeks of pre-election clashes in which hundreds are reported to have died.

Censorship of press and radio also was ordered by President Mariano Ospina Perez.

(News of the state of siege was filed Wednesday night by the Associated Press correspondent in Bogota and was not received in New York until this morning).

Continue Dragging For Three Drowned In Horne Lake

NANAIMO—According to B.C. provincial police the dragging operations in deep and treacherous Horne Lake in an effort to find the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Dentoff, Little Qualicum, and Bruce Ormond, Nanaimo, were being resumed today.

Dragging has been going on since the inboard-powered boat they were in was found floating upside-down in the lake last week-end. Police have enough evidence to indicate the three were drowned.

Mr. Ormond was manager of Ormond's Plumbing Company and Mr. Dentoff recently retired from the Dentoff Springs and Foundry firm. Cars belonging to Mr. Ormond and the Dentoffs were found at a Horne Lake cabin owned by Mr. Ormond in partnership with Bill Hobbs of Nanaimo.

Raise For Teachers

REGINA (BUP) — Regina grade teachers are to be given a $100 a year increase. This has been approved by the Regina Public School Board. The increase, which has to be approved by the teachers' committee, would cost the city $5,800 annually.

305 Argentine Reds Jailed After Show

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Three hundred and five Communists, including 160 women, were sentenced Wednesday to jail for four days. They were among 700 arrested last Saturday in Communist headquarters while celebrating the anniversary of the Russian Revolution. Three party leaders were given 15-day sentences.

Gold Value Fixed So Long As Truman President Of U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Truman said today there will be no change in the value of gold as long as he is President.

He replied that what he described as a categorical no when he was asked if anyone in the administration was giving consideration to raising the price of gold as a means of reducing the national debt.

Any such action would have to take the form of a recommendation to Congress.

The answer to the question, Truman said, is a categorical no. As long as he is President of the United States, he said, the value of gold is fixed.

New Coal Union Pact Talked As Men Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government today called in John L. Lewis and coal operators, seeking to get them working on a peace plan that would avert a new mine strike now due Dec. 1.

The operators promised to attend the meeting called by federal mediation chief Cyrus S. Ching, but nobody was sure in advance that union leader Lewis would be on hand.

Lewis got a "please reply" invitation from Ching, but didn't answer it. So Ching and his aides were assuming Lewis would attend. Lewis is reported to have left Chicago Wednesday, where he suddenly called off the 52-day coal strike.

The government men were expected to ask Lewis and the coal operators to get busy working out a new contract. They have been growling at each other without any evident progress toward a new agreement ever since the old one expired July 1.

Grounded Ship Andalucia Breaks

SEATTLE (AP)—The 7,700-ton freighter Andalucia broke amidships on its rocky underwater pinnacle Wednesday night and today the U.S. Coast Guard said the bow and stern sections are about 100 feet apart.

A three-man salvage crew, which went aboard Wednesday evening to attempt removal of the vessel's deck cargo of lumber, was removed when the hull began to crack.

The Andalucia went aground last Friday when the master attempted to beach her after fire had broke out in the engine room.

British Vessel Fired On

HONGKONG (AP)—Two Nationalist planes fired two bursts of machine-gun fire today at the British steamer Wosang.

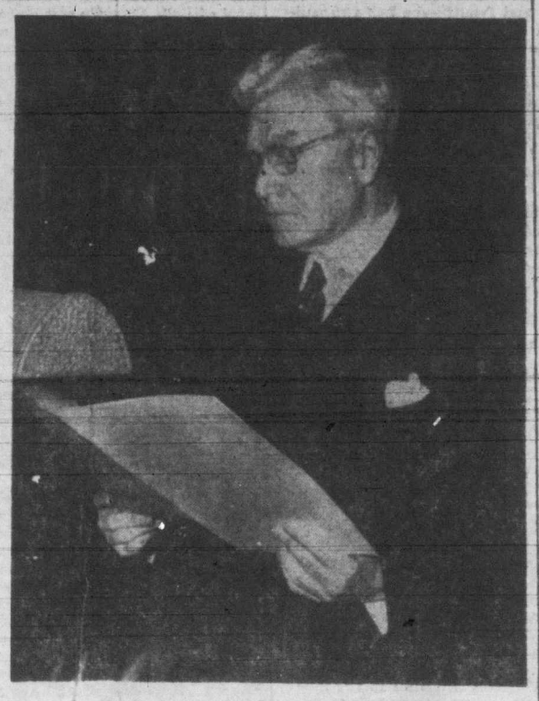
The ship is held at the mouth of the Yangtze River by a Nationalist gunboat. The British warship Alacrity is standing by just outside of Chinese territorial waters.

The vessel reported no hits.

The Wosang and the Tsinan, also British-operated, have been stopped by blockading Nationalist warships this week. They are both held at the mouth of the wide river while Chinese naval units try to force them to return Chinese passengers and cargo to Shanghai or dump them overboard.

HONGKONG (Reuter)—A Canadian Embassy official aboard the British vessel Wosang—intercepted in Chinese territorial waters by Chinese Nationalist warships—was transferred Wednesday to the British frigate Alacrity at the mouth of the Yangtze River, unconfirmed reports here indicated tonight.

The official was Bruce Irving Rankin, 31, of Brandon, Man., acting Canadian Trade Commissioner at Shanghai. He was en route to Ottawa on leave after being stationed in China since May, 1948.



Presents Industry's View

Senator J. W. deB. Farris, K.C., in the Court House this morning asked adjournment until Wednesday of the B.C. Compensation Board Act Inquiry, to speak on concession industry may make to the act.

Ship's Cargo Adrift

Lumber from the deckload of the sunken stern section of the freighter Andalucia is floating over a 15-mile area in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman at Neah Bay said today.

The 7,700-ton Panamanian ship, which has been lodged since Friday on a reef near the mouth of the strait four miles from Neah Bay, Wash., broke in half at No. 3 hatch during the night and the stern section sank.

Only a little of the sunken part is visible, the Coast Guard report said.

A Foss Tug and Barge Company employee at Clallam Bay, 15 miles east of Neah Bay, told the Coast Guard he could see lumber "all over the place!"

The Victoria tugs Island Commander and Island Navigator were working with the bow section at noon today and will attempt to pull it free at high water this afternoon.

The bow section moved towards shore slightly when the ship broke in half, indicating she still has buoyancy.

It is understood if the tugs free the bow section, they will beach and salvage what lumber they can.

The tug company men, assisted by the Coast Guard, put lines aboard the ship Wednesday night.

It was indicated that if this afternoon's attempt to pull the hulk free is unsuccessful, it may be given up as a total loss.

HEAVY SEA RUNNING

An eyewitness at Neah Bay told the Daily Times in a telephone interview that a sea was running this morning which was quite strong for the straits.

This, he added, prevented tugs from going alongside with a barge to take off any lumber. It would be dangerous, he said, to put a barge alongside because of the reef on which the ship has been stranded.

The Andalucia ran aground early Friday morning when after a fire in her engineroom had been extinguished.

Most of her crew of 27, including a stewardess, were removed, but the master, Capt. George Lemos, and six men remained aboard until Tuesday. A seventh man left the ship Monday to receive medical attention ashore.

Truman Knows Of No More Atomic Blasts In Russia

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Truman said today that to his knowledge there have not been any more atomic explosions in Soviet Russia since the one he announced in late September.

He was asked at a news conference whether there had been additional atomic explosions in Russia. He replied there had not been, as far as he knew.

The President also expressed hope that this country's relations with Russia are improving.

This developed from questions about the present Big Three foreign ministers' conference in Paris.

Detective Bringing Man From Detroit For Trial In Calgary

DETROIT (CP) — Detroit police said late today that investigation here of suspects held in the Calgary beer-bottle slaying of 23-year-old Yvonne Levesque last Aug. 11 had been completed.

William L. Wallace, 42, whom Detroit police said confessed to the slaying, was to leave for Calgary today to stand trial on a murder charge.

His 32-year-old wife Wilhelma, held for investigation of murder after Detroit police said Wallace had implicated her in his statement, was released from custody and returned to the Detroit apartment of her mother, the Marchioness d'Autier de la Rochebriant.

Detective John Marin of the Detroit homicide bureau said Wallace, a Canadian citizen, would leave here in custody of Det.-Sgt Bruce McCannell of Calgary at 3 p.m. E.S.T. today and would enter Canada through Windsor, Ont.

WATCHED BY MOTHER

Mrs. Wallace's mother, with whom she now will live, told reporters after her daughter's release that:

"I'm going to keep an eye on her from now on. She'll never get out of my sight again."

The marchioness said she would willingly go to Canada any time to testify against Wallace. She did not say whether her daughter would and Mrs. Wallace was not available for comment. Earlier she had denied implication in the slaying.

Morin said Mrs. Wallace "has established her American citizenship and today was released."

Skiing Attraction

OSLO (Reuter)—A Norwegian travel association plans to send snow to London in sufficient quantity to allow ski jumping in Hampstead Heath Park, the Norwegian telegraph bureau said today. Londoners would thus be given at home an idea of winter sport in Norway, the bureau said.

Lewis Snubs Govt.; U.S. Coal Talks End

WASHINGTON (AP)—John L. Lewis today snubbed the government's bid to a coal peace conference and Cyrus Ching, federal mediation director, said he was dropping his efforts to smooth the way to a new mining agreement.

Ching went to the White House and reported that Lewis, instead of showing up for the peace talks scheduled for this morning, had sent a wire saying he would see the mediators on Monday.

When he left the White House, Ching told reporters he would tell the mine owners here for the conference to go on home.

He said he had other plans and would be too busy to see Lewis on Monday.

Ching added: "I haven't any plans at this time for calling any further meetings in the coal dispute."

He hedged that a bit later, however, by saying he was not ruling out the possibility that another government effort to promote peace might be made.

Asked if he expected President Truman to take any action in the coal dispute in view of today's developments, Ching said:

"Not yet. There are no plans for anything like that yet. Nothing has been decided."

It was quite obvious, however, that the government was going to make strong efforts to prevent another coal walkout at the end of the month.

It was also plain that officials were pretty annoyed by Lewis' attitude toward the invitation to peace talks this morning.

Mayor Takes Stand On Administrator

With the civic elections nearing, Mayor Percy George today made clear his stand in the city administrator-manager dispute which has highlighted council committee meetings in the last two weeks.

If argument over administrator versus manager should become an election issue between himself and Ald. Aubrey Kent, who also is seeking the mayor's office for 1950 and 1951, Mayor George said he is prepared to fight to the finish in favor of a director of administration.

He was recaptured six hours later.

By this afternoon, 147 separate charges had been filed against them as police pursued a tangled skein of evidence leading to widespread break-ins and petty thefts that netted only an estimated $5,000 in loot.

To Make Concessions On Compensation Act

Representatives of nine associations will meet in Vancouver Tuesday afternoon to map a program and discuss concessions industry might be ready to make on the B.C. Workmen's Compensation Act.

This statement was made in the courthouse today by Senator J. W. deB. Farris, K.C., counsel for the industries concerned, when he asked for adjournment of the commission of inquiry into the act until Wednesday morning at 11.

No elaboration of what the concessions might be was given.

"I won't know until after the meeting," Senator Farris said in answer to a question following adjournment by Chief Justice Gordon McG. Sloan, commissioner.

The firms which Senator Farris is representing before the inquiry are: B.C. Lumber Manufacturers' Association; B.C. Mining Association; B.C. Truck Loggers' Association; Consolidated Red Cedar Shingle Association; Canadian Manufacturers' Association, B.C. He is appearing as joint counsel with Walter S. Owen, K.C., for the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association (Pacific Division) and the Salmon Canners' Operating Committee.

Filipino Forces Alerted For Threatened Uprising

MANILA, Philippines (UP)—Philippines government forces were alerted today to meet threats of attack by extremist forces protesting against President Elpidio Quirino's apparent sweeping victory in the presidential elections.

Quirino's Liberal party apparently captured the presidency, the vice-presidency and control of the important House of Representatives in the bloodiest election in Philippines history.

With more than half of the precincts counted, Quirino polled 888,828 votes against 822,048 for his closest opponent, Jose T. Laurel, former President under the Japanese puppet administration. The third candidate, Jose Avelino, polled 246,403 votes.

From these returns it appeared that Quirino's Liberal party would win at least 57 seats out of 100 in the important lower House of Congress.

One report from nearby Pasig said constabulary troops there were preparing to intercept 1,500 Hukbalahaps (dissident peasants) were allegedly concentrating in the mountains for a march on Manila.

This report said the Huks planned to infiltrate Manila and "kill every government official."

Police Probe $4,650,000 Blaze At Merseyside Dock

LIVERPOOL, Eng. (Reuter)—Police Scientist J. B. Firth of the Home Office today was called to investigate the fire which swept a great Merseyside warehouse at the Gladstone Dock here.

Four hundred firemen brought the blaze under control after an 18-hour battle, but the fire left a sea of molten rubber and dock avenues and roads in the area still were blazing this morning.

The warehouse, one of the largest in the world, was severely damaged.

With contents valued at £1,500,000 ($4,650,000) the 400-yard warehouse had been blazing fiercely since Wednesday afternoon.

Gold Value Fixed So Long As Truman President Of U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Truman said today there will be no change in the value of gold as long as he is President.

He replied that what he described as a categorical no when he was asked if anyone in the administration was giving consideration to raising the price of gold as a means of reducing the national debt.

Any such action would have to take the form of a recommendation to Congress.

The answer to the question, Truman said, is a categorical no. As long as he is President of the United States, he said, the value of gold is fixed.

One Woman's Day

By NANCY HODGES

POLIO, POETRY AND PHILOSOPHY

QUITE by accident I came across a little human interest story the other day which touched me very much, especially as it revolves around a former Victoria girl.

She is Mrs. F. C. Leonard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Walton, 3319 Quadra Street, and is now living in Los Angeles, where her husband is on the staff of the Department of Astronomy at the University of California.

As Rhoda Walton, she went to school here and subsequently taught at both Cedar Hill and Quadra Street schools. She was also a popular member of the Schubert Club until seven years ago when she left to make her home in the south.

SUDDENLY STRICKEN

THERE, the care of her home and family—she has two children—plus her singing and other outside interests kept her leading a busy life until September of last year, when she was suddenly stricken with polio.

After seven and a half months in an iron lung, the disease left her paralyzed. Today she is still confined to an invalid chair and can use one hand only a little.

But, happily, she is as alert mentally as ever and her long illness instead of atrophying her mind, has directed it to the development of another cultural gift—the creation of poetry.

'LONELINESS'

HER FATHER showed me some verses that she had written, touchingly entitled "Loneliness." Here it is:

"A vibrant haze, a misty blue,
Deep within its reaches, calling,
Gleams anew the crimson light
Of hope.
I stumble blindly, falling.

"The light recedes; I realize
Futility. And still I grope,
Soul and mind, driven by longing
Toward the crimson beckoning
Of hope.

"The scene changes, until there float
Upon my consciousness the forms
And figures of the humdrum day.
Love sleeps.
And lying over life holds sway."

COURAGEOUS SOULS

AS THOSE verses indicate, it takes courage of a rare sort to rise above the physical impairment and mental depression a long illness of this nature entails. Not that this former Victoria girl's case is isolated—not by any means.

The recent exhibition at the Victoria Arts Centre of original paintings done by tubercular patients, many of whom had never tried their hand at art before, is a similar exemplification of the triumph of mind over matter, so to speak.

You have only to go to the Veterans' Hospital to see how former athletes have conquered the physical limitations imposed by years of helplessness and pain and are, literally in some cases, carving themselves new cultural pursuits and even careers.

FINE PHILOSOPHY

I WELL remember, back during the war years, the exquisite soap carvings, the clever murals, the intricate carving and cabinet work turned out by exservicemen who had been badly wounded—the art and craft work being encouraged as part of the therapeutic and rehabilitating treatment.

In the doing of it, many a patient has discovered latent talents which might never have been brought to light under other circumstances. And in the discovery it has brought them an outlet through which to express a philosophy that is only to be learned in the school of suffering.

So I quote that polio patient's poetry to remind those of us who possess sound bodies and sound minds how fortunate we are and how much we have to be thankful for. It ill behooves us to grumble and "gripe" at petty annoyances which, after all, are even more infinitesimal in the light of what some people have to endure and endure with such courage and fortitude.

Continue Dragging For Three Drowned In Horne Lake

NANAIMO.—According to B.C. provincial police the dragging operations in deep and treacherous Horne Lake in an effort to find the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Dendoff, Little Qualicum, and Bruce Ormond, Nanaimo, were being resumed today.

Dragging has been going on since the inboard-powered boat they were in was found floating upside-down in the lake last week-end. Police have enough evidence to indicate the three were drowned.

Mr. Ormond was manager of Ormond's Plumbing Company and Mr. Dendoff recently retired from the Dendoff Springs and Foundry firm. Cars belonging to Mr. Ormond and the Dentoffs were found at a Horne Lake cabin owned by Mr. Ormond in partnership with Bill Hobbs of Nanaimo.

Low Incidence Of Chickenpox Here

Despite Vancouver's record high in the number of chickenpox cases, Victoria-Esquimalt health district authorities today reported there had been no unusual incidence of the disease here in the past few months.

So far this month, there have been reported only 14 cases. In the whole of November last year there were 84 cases reported. The total for October this year was 11 cases. The total for October, 1948, was 86.

During the summer months of July, August and September, during the most of which time, students were on holiday, there were a total of 21 cases in the health district, as compared to 34 for a similar period last year.

To date this year there have been 500 cases of chickenpox in Victoria and Esquimalt, as compared with 441 for the whole of 1948 and 454 for 1947, but health officials do not feel the slight increase this year is unusual.

Saanich reported 26 cases of chickenpox during October, but none have been reported so far this month.

Plant Dismantling May Be Halted In German Industry

PARIS (AP)—The west's Big Three foreign ministers were reported today to have agreed that most dismantling of German industry should stop.

State Secretary Dean Acheson of the United States, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Britain and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France, also were said by informed sources to have moved closer toward allowing the new West German Republic to join the Council of Europe.

Conditions for discontinuing the dismantling of German plants had yet to be worked out in the Big Three talks that opened Wednesday. Britain still insists that such potential war industries as synthetic rubber and synthetic oil should be torn down, one source said.

The ministers reported "satisfactory progress" in Wednesday's talks and expected to wind up tonight or early tomorrow morning with a definite announcement of agreements.

Diplomatic sources said they had reached accord in principle, at least, on ways to give Western Germany an international voice for the first time since the war's end, possibly modifying the state of war which still exists between the western allies and the former enemy country.

15 Members Already Named As Manitoba Goes To Polls

WINNIPEG (CP) — This is election day in Manitoba. Some 200,000 voters may mark ballots for or against Premier D. L. Campbell's Coalition government, a combination formed in 1940 mainly of Liberal-Progressives and Progressive Conservatives.

The government entered the contest with 20 seats tucked safely under its belt. Fifteen Coalition candidates were acclaimed on nomination day, four seats are contested only by government supporters, and one riding has only three opposition contenders for its four seats.

Balloting was expected to fall short of the 1945 figure of 219,000 because of the large number of acclamations and a quiet campaign.

To the C.C.F., main opposition force, prospects looked dismal. E. A. Hansford, leader of the party and the Opposition, said on nomination day Coalition reelection seemed inevitable. Both he and Edmond Prefontaine, a former Coalition supporter who broke off to join the Manitoba Democratic Movement, have concentrated their campaign on the need for a strong opposition.

The campaign itself centred around whether or not the Coalition should be continued. Government supporters lauded its record for sound and stable administration, and opposition elements claimed it was trying to perpetuate its existence.

Seats in the Legislature total 57.

Revenue From Income Tax Reaches All-Time High Point

OTTAWA (BUP) — Canadian individuals and companies during the past year have paid income taxes on a scale exceeding even the peak of collections during World War II.

This rugged fact—together with a wealth of other painful details—came out into the open here today with the publication by the Department of National Revenue of its annual "Green Book."

The "Green Book" is the Department of National Revenue's annual statistical classic which tells Canadians virtually everything they want to know about the income tax, excess profits tax, and succession duties tax—except how to get out of paying them.

Here are some of the more arresting details by which it packs reader interest into its current volume, just hot off the press:

Income tax collections for the period ended March 31 of this year (both individual and corporation) totaled $1,297,999,404. The wartime peak was reached in 1944, with a total of $1,151,757,035.

Collections during the excess profits tax, which reached a wartime high of $468,717,840, also in 1944, dropped last year to a comparative trickle of $44,791,918.

Under the three taxes British Columbia crashed the class of hundred-million-dollar contributors with a total of $157,648,665.

Action On Report Awaits Decision On City Administrator

No part of the report by Stevenson, Kellogg Ltd., business engineers, has been adopted yet at City Hall, pending decision on appointment of a city administrator.

City fathers apparently believe it wiser to reach a decision on the administrator before making any attempt to revamp departments under the recommendations of the report.

It is felt that any adoption of sections of the report, prior to appointment of the administrator, would be premature and lead to confusion.

The Stevenson-Kellogg report included a chart outlining the phases of administrative responsibility under the city's departmental set-up and places the proposed director of administration at the head of the list, responsible only to the mayor and council.

Rent Increase Order Clarified At 18 To 22%

OTTAWA (CP)—Maximum rental boosts which can be made on self-contained dwellings next month are 18 and 22 per cent of "existing ceiling-rentals," Owen Lobley, Canada's rental administrator, said today.

Tenants living in rooms can have their rents increased by a straight 20 per cent.

The administrator fixed these rates to prevent "pyramiding" of general cross-country boosts allowed by Finance Minister Abbott's announcement last Thursday increasing rents 20 and 25 per cent of pre-1948 levels.

The new increases will go into effect Dec. 15.

But most tenants won't start paying higher rents until Feb. 1, 1950. That is because tenants who rent on a monthly basis must be given a full month's notice of the increase.

Mr. Lobley said rental orders implementing the recent changes in the rentals regulations now have been completed. Copies will be available to the public in rental offices Nov. 18.

The 18 per cent increase applies to unheated self-contained dwellings; the 22 per cent increase to heated.

Defines 'Self Contained'

A self-contained dwelling is one in which the tenant has complete use of toilet facilities. If he has to share them with others than his household, then the accommodation becomes a "lodging" or a room.

In his statement, Mr. Lobley also announced:

1. Tenants who undertake to pay the increases must be given a new lease for at least 12 months. In no case can it terminate before May 1, 1951.

2. Tenants signing leases of two years and more cannot be evicted during the course of the lease to permit the landlord to sell the accommodation.

3. Landlords who owned accommodation before Nov. 1, 1949, and want to recover possession must give the tenant six-months' notice to vacate. The accommodation cannot be sold before April 1, 1951.

4. Landlords who want to recover accommodation, will have to show a "genuine and demonstrable need." Otherwise they may encounter "legal difficulties" if the tenant refuses to vacate. The rule which prevents these types of vacating notices falling due in the winter has been lifted for the winter of 1950-51. It remains in effect for the winter of 1949-50.

5. Landlords who show "grievous financial hardships" will be permitted to regain possession of accommodation which they previously could not recover.

6. Houses erected by companies for use of their employees become free of rental controls.

7. The rental administrator will hear cases where landlords want to regain possession of property to expand commercial enterprises.

8. The rental boosts will see the end of "sundry allowances" previously made. These included local increases to meet higher taxes, renovations and property improvements.

Asked by reporters if he thought the removal of "sundry" allowances would discourage landlords from redecorating and maintaining property, Mr. Lobley said he believed it might discourage interior decoration but not outside repair and maintenance.

High Costs Blamed For Loss Sustained By Telegraph Firms

OTTAWA (BUP) — Canada's telegraph and cable companies today blamed higher operating costs, including wages, for leaving them in the red in 1948 for the first time in 31 years.

The companies, including the Canadian National, Canadian Pacific and their overseas connecting services, said higher costs of materials and pay raises for their employees set them back $20,292,000 during the year.

A Dominion Statistics Bureau report issued Wednesday said the telegraph and cable firms showed a deficit in 1948 for the first time since 1917. The report was based on information supplied by the firms.

It said the companies' gross revenues in 1948 reached a new record level for a 12-month period and jumped 5 per cent over the preceding year to hit a total of $19,423,000.

The report added, however, that the increase was offset by a 17 per cent boost in operating expenses. It left a deficit of $870,000 for 1948 compared with a credit of $1,155,000 in 1947.

Mr. Justice James M. Coady in Assize Court today, excused the panel jury until 10.30 Monday in view of the Remembrance Day holiday Friday.

$1,000 Fire Damage To Oak Bay Home

Damage totaling about $1,000 was done to a home rented by Mr. and Mrs. Gellert, 2022 Byron Street, Wednesday afternoon by a fire in the parlor. Oak Bay firemen said they believed the first was caused by sparks flying from an open fireplace.

The municipal fire department got the alarm at 2.55 and quickly had the blaze under control. About $500 damage was done to the room and about the same loss to furnishings.

Mrs. Gellert was home alone at the time. Two of her own paintings were destroyed in the fire. The Gellerts were in the throes of packing up to move when the fire occurred, police said.

Condition Of Man Said Good After Fishboat Founders

Condition of Wilmot Prittie, Vancouver, was reported from Comox Hospital today as "fairly good," following rescue of the Dominion government fisheries guardian from a foundering troller in the Straits of Georgia Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Prittie was removed from the sinking Dorabel when she was awash between Cape Lazo and Denman Island, by provincial police.

A cat was all the mainland man was able to save.

SUFFFERING FROM SHOCK

Mr. Pritte is reported to be suffering from shock. His boat was battered by high waves for about four hours and sprang a leak, which the fisheries man was unable to check.

Constables E. C. Domay and Arthur Muskett of the Courtenay detachment of the provincial police, borrowed the power boat Carrdeas from John Boyd and set out with Capt. J. Brackett to aid the Dorabel.

An R.C.A.F. crash boat was dispatched from Patricia Bay and an air force Canso aircraft from Sea Island flew over the scene.

The fisheries patrol vessel Prusepa, the tug Queen and a few civilian craft headed for the Dorabel.

CLOSE CALL

It was a close call for Mr. Prittie, for the Carrdeas reached the scene as the troller was about to founder. He lowered himself into a small rowboat and closed with the rescue boat. The rowboat had shipped quite a bit of water by the time the Carrdeas reached it.

The Carrdeas took the Dorabel, her deck awash, in tow, but the troller finally sank as she crossed the Comox sandbar.

Lest We Forget

More than 100,000 Canadians lost their lives in two world wars during this century, and on the battlegrounds where they died are impressive memorials to their sacrifice. Their names are written in the Book of Remembrance in the Peace Tower at Ottawa, shown in the middle of this Canadian Army composite photo. On Vimy Ridge, where the Canadian Corps stormed a German strong-point on April 9, 1917, stands the tall white monument. Near Groesbeek, a tiny Dutch village, neat white crosses mark the last resting place of many who fell during the Second World War.—(CP Photo)

Only One Woman Candidate Today In Manitoba Election

WINNIPEG (CP) — Mrs. Ina Thompson, earnest and attractive and the mother of a three-year-old, the only woman seeking election in today's Manitoba general election, at times campaigned 16 hours a day — and says she loved it.

"I don't understand why more women don't become active in politics," she said in an election-eve interview.

"There's everything there—talk, social life, association with interesting people and leaders of government. People don't seem to connect government with their everyday lives."

Slight and ash-blonde, with twinkling blue eyes, Mrs. Thompson came out as a C.C.F. candidate in the four-member Winnipeg Centre constituency. She invaded industrial plants to publicize her party's social welfare program, its main campaign plank.

She talked to railway men in the roundhouse and the coach yard. She rose at 5.30 a.m. to catch steel-workers going to their noisy job.

"They smile and kind of look sideways at me," said Mrs. Thompson, 28 years old and easy to look at. "A good number pat me on the shoulder and say, 'Good for you'."

She canvassed hundreds of homes. Housewives, she said, were "most enthusiastic" about having a woman in the running.

Mrs. Thompson was born at Makaroff, Man., on the Saskatchewan border near Yorkton, is the daughter of a farmer.

Eight years ago she came here and married Rev. Leslie Thompson, now a lecturer in English at the University of Manitoba. They have a three-year-old son, Tom.

Wanted Consultation On Parks Referendum

NANAIMO — City Council's action in calling for a referendum on a parks mill rate without first discussing the matter with the parks commission, has caused strong resentment on the part of the commissioners.

Philip J. Piper, commission chairman, said his group had not asked for a plebiscite and was of the opinion the council should have consulted the commission on the matter. Commissioners want to meet council members prior to the plebiscite, preferably Saturday morning.

The proposed referendum would ask the ratepayers if they would approve an increased mill rate to provide additional funds for parks, three mills to raise $10,000, or one and a half mills to raise $5,000.

Pay Full Honors

NANAIMO—Full military honors were accorded today at the funeral of Francis Corrie, who died suddenly Sunday. Service was held under the auspices of Nanaimo branch No. 10, Canadian Legion. Canon N. S. Noel officiated. Burial was made in Nanaimo Cemetery.

Services Held For Raymond Kershaw

Funeral services were held in Victoria today for Raymond Kershaw, former Winnipeg theatre owner and manager, who died here Tuesday. He was 79.

Born in Ceylon, he came to Canada in 1888. He spent most of his life in Winnipeg, acquiring there in 1913 ownership of the Wonderland, Osborne and Tivoli theatres. He retired from theatre managing in 1931 and came to Victoria.

He is survived by one son, Frank, living in Calgary.

War Dead Will Be Honored By Citizens At Services Friday

Citizens of Greater Victoria, with most of the rest of the world, will observe Remembrance Day Friday at several ceremonies and services honoring the dead of two world wars.

The ceremony at the Cenotaph in front of the Parliament Buildings will be in charge of the Canadian Legion, whose members will parade in civilian clothes, wearing medals.

It is expected many more medals will be in evidence this year with Second World War veterans receiving their awards daily in the mail

TWO MINUTE SILENCE

Start and finish of the traditional two minutes silence period of remembrance at 11 in the morning will be marked by firing of Royal Canadian Artillery guns at the Cenotaph and by tolling of Christ Church Cathedral's tenor bell.

Other ceremonies include one at Esquimalt at 11, preceded by a parade from the Canadian Legion Hall, 622 Admirals Road, to the Esquimalt Cenotaph via Lyall and Joffre Streets and Esquimalt Road.

At 3 Friday afternoon, a simple family service will be held at the Oak Bay War Memorial on Beach Drive in Uplands Park.

Services will be conducted by Archdeacon A. de L. Nunns of St. Mary's Church, and Rev. W. W. McPherson of Oak Bay United Church. Reeve R. A. Wootton and councillors will attend. A navy bugler will sound Reveille and The Last Post.

TO LAY WREATH

At the city ceremony, Capt. H. F. Pullen, commanding officer of H.M.C.S. Ontario, and senior naval officer presently on this coast, will lay a wreath on behalf of the navy's Pacific Command.

Mrs. S. F. Leech, who lost a son in the Second World War, has been asked by the Canadian Legion to lay a wreath at the Cenotaph on behalf of bereaved mothers of Victoria.

Prior to the service, veterans, led by Brig. F. N. Cabeldu and Maj. G. S. Yardley, will march at the front of a parade south on the causeway. Following will be detachments from the navy, army, reserve army, air force, sea, air and army cadets, boy scouts and girl guides.

The veterans will form up at 10.30 on Humboldt Street off Government and the other units will gather on Wharf Street behind the Post Office.

Bands participating will include the navy band, the air cadet trumpet and drum band, the Canadian Scottish pipe band, and an army regimental band.

From a saluting base, Brig. M. P. Bogert and provincial civic officials, and service chiefs will take the salute following the half-hour ceremony at the Cenotaph.

The 5th (B.C.) Coast Regt., the 75th (B.C.) Heavy Anti-Aircraft Regt., and the 8th A.A. Gun Operations Room will be represented by some 50 personnel under Capt. R. V. Parrett.

A wreath will be placed at the Cenotaph by Lt.-Col. W. J. Farnsworth, commanding officer of the 75th (B.C.) Regt.

LUNCH IN MESSES

Following the service, lunches will be served for all ranks in their respective messes. Many invitations have been accepted by former officer and friends of the regiment to have lunch, buffet style, in the officers' mess.

The commanding officer and officers will be "at home" in their mess at 9 in the evening. Approximately 90 officers and invited guests will attend.

There will be a memorial service at the Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's) war memorial in Pioneer Square immediately following the Cenotaph service. Arrangements are being handled by the Canadian Scottish Regimental Association.

DISABLED VETERANS

SOMETHING TO STUDY

ASSURANCE OF A MAYORALTY CONtest next month promises to lift Victoria's civic elections out of the doldrums in which they have rested during recent years. Announcement of the candidature of Ald. Aubrey Kent in opposition to Mayor Percy George will give the voters a choice in their selection of a chief magistrate for the first time since the present incumbent took office. That, in itself, should do much to stimulate interest in the branch of government which is closest to the people.

During the next four weeks the citizens may look forward to detailed explanations of the platforms on which the respective aspirants base their requests for public support. Earlier this week a call was made through these columns to candidates to state clearly their position on the question of amalgamation. That, of course, is not the only issue that will emerge as the campaign develops. It is, however, one which demands clear enunciation from those who are prepared to serve this community. Unquestionably the city manager scheme will be an important plank in platforms that are built, as will general questions of finance. The latter point is of specific importance not because the civic barometer forecasts stormy weather immediately ahead, but because prudent work at the helm now may avoid threat of shipwreck when and if the revenue tides begin to recede.

It is not of great importance that the voters of Victoria should fix their allegiance to any specific candidate at this time. What is vital, on the other hand, is that they interest themselves in the stands taken by the individuals seeking their votes on the second Thursday in December. Victoria's business is too important, at this stage, to permit haphazard selection of stewards. More than 18,000 citizens are now enfranchised. It is up to them to familiarize themselves with the issues and use their ballots intelligently.

REPUBLICAN DEFEAT

DEMOCRATS IN THE UNITED STATES are elated over the election of former Governor Herbert H. Lehman to the Senate. His adversary was Mr. John Foster Dulles, known as the Republican spokesman for our neighbor's "bi-partisan" foreign policy, and outspokenly critical of the "welfare state." The contest was occasioned by the resignation last June of Democratic Senator Robert F. Wagner, and it will be the final year of his term that his successor will fill on Capitol Hill. Mr. Dulles has held the seat since last July on an interim appointment.

The battle which ended in the polling booths on Tuesday had been a spirited one in which the rival candidates employed every conceivable argument to influence the electorate, since Mr. Truman himself regarded the issues involved as of sufficient national importance for him to deliver a major speech in support of the candidature of Mr. Lehman.

From reports of the campaign, and particularly in view of the challenging tone of his appeal for the election of the former Governor of New York State, the President and his advisers had regarded the defeat of Mr. Dulles as an essential filip to the administration's hopes for success at next year's congressional elections. It should be noted, however, that failure of Mr. Lehman to win Tuesday's important political prize would scarcely have been considered a serious blow to the Truman regime because, after all, Governor Dewey had matters substantially his own way in that part of the country when the President surprised his party stalwarts and all the prognosticators a little more than a year ago. In other words, and here is fresh proof of his understanding of the feelings of the people, the chief executive, by making known his desires in this contest, had nothing whatever to lose and everything to gain. His course of action has obviously justified itself.

Regardless of the specific national and international issues dealt with by the rival aspirants to the vacant Senate seat, however, Canada and Canadians are interested in the outcome of the voting in New York, for the reason that Mr. Lehman is mindful of the urgent necessity of removing tariff barriers in the interests of the preservation of the "solid economic base" of the structure to which Secretary of State Dean Acheson referred in New York the other day. The "bi-partisan" label worn by Mr. Dulles did not obscure the fact that he still belongs to the same school of economic royalists as the indomitable Republican Senator Robert H. Taft of Ohio. Mr. Lehman's triumph, therefore, will be cold comfort to those who worship an effete Toryism.

MORNING AFTER

ALL IS APPARENTLY QUIET ON THE social sector of the diplomatic front, judging by the results of official parties given by Russian embassies in various capitals this week. The occasion of the festivities, of course, was the celebration of the 32nd anniversary of the founding of the Soviet Union, and both in Ottawa and Washington the event was marked by an outbreak of cordiality and warmth that had no resemblance to the other kind of outbreaks that feature international conferences.

At a lavish reception in Washington, more than 1,400 guests shook hands with the Russian Foreign Minister, Andrei Y. Vishinsky, who was wreathed in smiles for the event. Gone were the tenseness and diatribes of Big Four debates; well in the background were the vituperation and verbal abuse that have marred so many business gatherings at which the Russians have been present. It was one of the few times since the beginning of the cold war that the Russian Embassy had resounded to the pleasant chattering of invited guests. No stranger viewing the scene could have doubted that here were the best of friends making merry together.

In Ottawa, the festivities, although on a smaller scale, were equally amiable. Prime Minister St. Laurent broke the ice that has existed around the Russian Embassy since the days of the espionage trial, paying the first official call by the head of the Canadian government in more than four years. The more-than-generous hospitality of the Russians was much in evidence.

But the parties, as all parties must, came to an end. The guests returned to their offices and homes. The hosts cleaned up the debris. And now we have again assumed the state of armed truce, cold war, two worlds—call it what you will to describe the political "morning after." A pity that the affability and good cheer must be thrown out with the vodka dregs.

WAITING TO BE KICKED?

THIS NEWSPAPER HAS CALLED CONsistently for the amalgamation of Greater Victoria municipalities into one administrative whole. It sees that development as an inevitability. It has not, however, suggested that the step could be taken without serious study and searching discussion. The councils and residents of the various districts should know what they are doing when unification is effected.

How then, in the name of common sense, can Saanich afford to refuse to explore "the possibilities of amalgamation"? And what does Reeve E. C. Warren mean when he says that had Saanich residents wanted amalgamation they would have exerted pressure on the council to achieve it? Does the reeve suggest that Saanich will not move until the council has been kicked into action? Recent events might suggest just that.

Two councillors at least are prepared to seek instructions on the issue. As Councillor Leslie H. Passmore noted: "Nobody can criticize a council for trying to obtain knowledge. This is all the people would be asked: Are they in favor of us 'exploring the possibilities of amalgamation'?"

If unification were effected, quite conceivably the reeve would yield some of his present power. But with the problems that municipality faces, what hope of progress is provided by an attitude which metaphorically buries the official head in the sand and waits for the public to put its foot to the exposed body? And what kind of yokelry is indicated in the words of one representative who says "If Victoria wants a part of the Garden of Vancouver Island let them come after us for it." Just possibly the city might look with some suspicion on a garden in which some of the lush growth springs from septic tank nutriment, in which some of the bonfires demolish homes, and in which some aridness occurs through inadequate water supply.

TWO VIEWS ON ONE SUBJECT

IT MAY BE DOING THE BEETLE-browed gentleman an injustice, but it is interesting to compare the John L. Lewis policy committee statement yesterday with the analysis of the United States coal strike made by the Alsop brothers and presented on this page the day before.

As the policy committee ordered miners back to work until Nov. 30, it gave utterance to this high-sounding pronouncement:

> As an act of good faith designed to contribute to public convenience, the United Mine Workers of America again will make another contribution of major magnitude to enhance the remote possibility of agreement being reached.

The Alsop brothers, on the preceding day had remarked:

> With customary ability, John L. Lewis may duck under the wire. But it is still an important fact that President Truman has been prepared to use the Taft-Hartley Act against the United Mine Workers' leader from the very beginning of the present steel and coal strike emergency.
> In effect, White House strike strategy has been based on a sharp distinction between the politically friendly Philip Murray and his steelworkers, and the politically hostile John L. Lewis and his mine workers. The whole federal mediation effort has been exclusively concentrated on securing the accord in the steel strike which now seems to be under way. And the intention has been to remove Philip Murray from the line of fire, and then, if necessary, turn all of the govment's big guns on John Lewis.

The Washington columnists apparently called the shot on the dispute between the U.M.W. and owners. Their summation dims the aura of righteousness with which Lewis' statement has been surrounded. And when the mine workers' boss urges private American householders and public institutions to provide themselves between now and the end of the month with sufficient fuel to meet a further possible suspension of operations "in event that the contemptuous arrogance of the coal operators remains undiminished," another recent statement is recalled. The words are those of Canada's Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell, who in Victoria this week expressed his view that wages should be "as high as the traffic will bear."

In the painful determination of the limits defined by "as high as the traffic will bear," not only our neighbors to the south are subjected to inconvenience, waste and misery. The inter-dependence of our economies spreads the results far afield.

German Civil Service

By LINDLEY FRASER from London

IF A DEMOCRACY is to be genuine it is vital that it should have the right kind of civil service. To bring health to that part of the German administration has therefore been a foremost task of the Western Allies in preparing Germany for a democratic way of life and system of government. A report just issued by the British government shows that much has been achieved in this direction.

The task has been an ambitious one, particularly as it was undertaken in the aftermath of Germany's collapse in war. When, in 1945, the Allies took over responsibility for the conduct of public affairs in their occupation zones, they had first to restore and maintain order while laying the foundations of their long-term work.

THEY FROM the first found themselves faced with the following major difficulties: firstly, the German civil government was in chaos; secondly, the most competent German administrators had been members of the Nazi Party. Many of them had to be excluded from public service because of their political record; thirdly, the German administrative system had been highly centralized, especially under the Hitler regime, and the local officials were accustomed to take orders more from a government department in Berlin, than from town or county councils representing the population they were supposed to be serving; fourthly, the idea of a non-political civil service was largely alien to German thinking and traditions.

THE FIRST TWO of these four problems have by now been largely overcome. The restoration of order in civilian government affairs was accomplished with surprising speed and success though at the cost of much heart burning about the use of leading ex-Nazis. To the average military government officer it seemed more important in 1945 to rebuild bridges, restore sewage and drainage systems and re-establish supplies of gas and electricity than to worry about the political record of the German officials through whom these tasks had to be carried out. For this reason the second problem, that of denazification, took far longer to solve than was palatable either to the occupation authorities or to the mass of the Germans themselves. But this issue too is by now largely settled, though practically no German will agree that it has been settled satisfactorily. (Some say that the purges were far too drastic, others that they were not nearly drastic enough. Doubtless both were to some extent right).

PROBLEMS THREE and four are of a longer-term nature.

The firm intention of the western powers has been to effect a radical decentralization in Germany's governmental apparatus. The basic law of the new German government empowers provincial (or "land") governments to draft their own local government laws which they are free to work out in their own way. But real success must depend on building up a lively democratic interest on the part of the ordinary German in local affairs. A regional or provincial civil service which is not watched over by vigilant elected representatives of the local population is bound either to become bureaucratic and dictatorial or else to look for its instructions to a central administration. The civil service tradition inherited from past decades in Germany involved both these faults. The typical city or country official was likely to be subservient towards the national authorities in Berlin but made up for this by being independent and even autocratic in his relations with his town or county council. Often, indeed, local policy decisions were taken not by the elected representatives of the locality but by permanent officials.

IN ORDER to establish a healthier state of affairs, we have to convince the German civil servants that they must regard themselves not as policy framers but as advisers and executives, and must leave political decisions to the elected representatives of the people, i.e., to town and county councils and provincial assemblies.

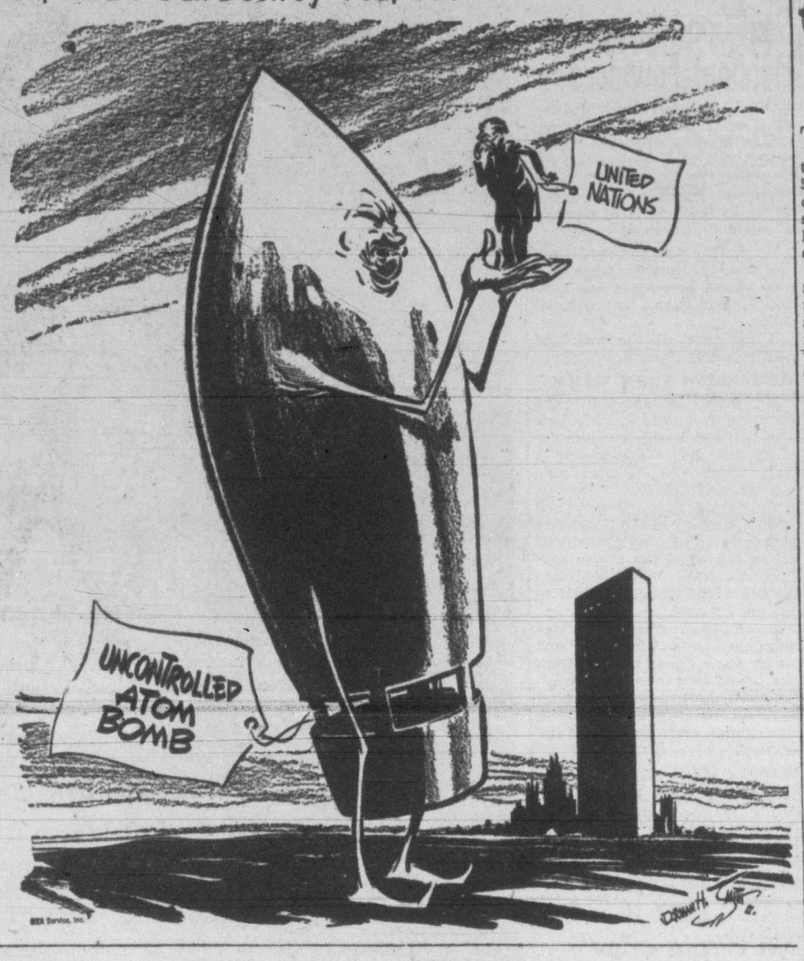
They have also to be convinced that as officials they must voluntarily forego some, at least, of their political rights as citizens and in particular their right to take a leading part in party political strife. The existence of a "non-political" civil service—a body of officials who will loyally and efficiently serve whatever party or government is in power, regardless of their own private political convictions—is an essential pre-condition for combining democratic freedom with political stability.

THAT LESSON has been learnt by long and bitter experience in Britain and most other western countries. It still has to be learnt in Germany and few Germans take kindly to the idea. As politicians they want to have control over civil service recruitment (in some cases no doubt with the hope of installing their own friends or proteges in important official posts); as civil servants they want freedom to pursue their own political aims and ambitions. But some progress has been made in overcoming the German prejudice against a decentralized non-political civil service.

After all, you can't build a locomotive in a cottage.—Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru of India, referring to India's "cottage industry."

The Chinese Communists have gained control with the help of Russian influence, but ill-feeling already is developing in rural areas as the real nature of communism becomes clear.—Premier Shigeru Yoshida of Japan.

'Yeh, And I Can Destroy You, Too'



At The Cenotaph

By OLIVEN RODSTROM

THE figure of the man in war gear dominates the scene, raised high on his stone pedestal, as of old upon the high places of the wilderness, the "rock of sacrifice," uplifted for all to see, reminiscent of Another, between those far-off times and these days.

This carven figure holding the bayonet is not in the attitude of attack, he is bracing himself to the onslaught; significant, perhaps unconsciously, of his people's general attitude.

ONE OF MANY

He is not as captain of the hosts, but one of the great host, himself. Though he wears the land-fighters' honored old khaki, the mind can make it become a dark and favorite blue, so like the night sky that the sailor knows so well. And again, the reflection of the autumnal heavens turns that uniform upon the figure to as blue a shade as the hour of the dawn patrol.

They are all there, land and sea and sky fighters, defenders, any and all whose lives were not stinted in the demanding hour. Women as well as their stronger brothers, even children in the aid of their fighting brothers.

Amid the glowing green of the perennial verdure of these western ramparts (a last front against the Western Sea, as was the one raised on the Isle of Arran which completed a chain from ancient Mycenae), there stands the image of one strong, tensed, ordinary man. He towers above the garden-scene of Victoria's evergreen haven, more than lifesize. He is still, grim, and vigilant.

Law and Government are housed in granite behind him. With all its imperfections, still it is Law, open to our investigation, tolerant of our embittered railings, amenable to suggestions, and innocent of concentration camps.

ANCIENT BADGE

Beside the man is, remarkably, the most ancient of our emblematic badges, the high towering evergreen tree. Perfect in form for its symbolism, broad-based, aspiring upward in a cone shape, reaching the high point of its achievement, like the Chinese pagoda, in "a height attained by degrees of progress." This is one of the earliest of our racial emblems, this tree, surviving notably in the coats of arms among the Scots and Ulster bearings. The tree ever filled with life, that green fire of the magic Celtic (and incidentally Germanic) tree that is aflame and yet never consumed.

From the high grey steps before the doors where Law and Government are housed; and upon which doors is carved the Greek peacock of Juno, which was also the companion, or fylgja of Frigga, Norse Odin's wife, and has been found sacrificed in Viking grave-mounds; there before the wide oak doorway we look down upon a remarkable scene. Serene against the soft blue sky, mottled with shreds of white like the sacred white wool fillets of the ancient Greek suppliant mourners, uprears the great cone-shaped fir tree, beyond it stands a granite, pointed memorial stone, another most antique custom of the kin of the man in war dress.

NEW OUTPOST

Over the still and gleaming salt water of the harbor one word stands out largely—Canadian. The next word is hidden from view, but it is also the name of the great sea which washes all the rocky shores of this new outer wall, as the Atlantic surged against the beachheads of another outer island which we now called the Old Land.

'The Coming Age Of Wood'

By R. J. DEACHMAN

THE CAPTION of this article is the title of a book: "The Coming Age of Wood." The author is Dr. Egon Glesinger. It reads like a tale from "Alice in Wonderland." The essence of the story is that wood can give us nearly all the things we need—alcohol, clothing, chemicals, gasoline, food, fuel, paper, wood sugar and lignin, the mystery product for which uses are being developed.

SUPPLY SOURCE

"Its universality and abundance," writes Dr. Glesinger, "guarantees wood its pre-eminence over sheeps' backs, coal mines and cotton fields as the supply source for the bulk of materials needed to clothe, house, educate, and otherwise enrich the life of the coming generation. . . . Generating from one to two tons of fibre a year, unattended, a forest acre can match the annual harvest of five acres of good cotton land; genetics and intensive management can multiply this output three times and more."

Who is Dr. Glesinger? He was born in Czechoslovakia. There is no doubt as to his ability and intelligence. He comes from a family which has been in the lumber business for four generations. He is a graduate of the Institute of International Studies at Geneva, and became Secretary-General of the International Timber Committee sponsored by the League of Nations.

In "The Coming Age of Wood" he gives us a preview of what we may expect to see in the future, when wood comes into its own.

NEW LIFE

The industry entered a new life when pulp wood became the source of textiles. Rayon is occupying second place in the world's fabrics. Synthetic wood fibres, while still considered new, made their debut before 1890.

Another surprise was the use of wood products as human and animal food. Cellulose cattle feed enriched with soy beans was used as cattle food, sometimes enriched with yeast manufactured from waste liquids of the sulphide pulp mills. These wood products were even used, in a limited way, as human food in Swedish restaurants.

This, of course, was in wartime but it shows the possibilities—the horizon broadens, new uses for wood are developing from year to year. Soap, industrial oils, plastics, lacquers, resins, cosmetics, medicines and other commodities came from the forests of Sweden during the war.

GREAT PROSPECTS

The fascination of the book comes from the prospects it envisions. The average man is quite well aware of the great forward steps which have been made in the paper industry in the last few years. This book offers a new and different vision of the future of forests, their capacity for raising the standards of living throughout the whole world.

Disunity In Unity

London (Ont.) Free Press

Attempts to unify the fighting services in the United States have produced the most thunderous disunity that has ever existed in the history of notoriously jealous branches of defence. U.S. army, navy and air force officers are engaged in something considerably more heated than a cold war. Which goes to show that even a good thing, like unification, may have unexpected and unhappy results. It also shows that President Truman may make mistakes, but he also makes decisions, and sticks to them, right or wrong, come hell or high water.

Main Industry

Financial Post

John G. Bridges, the director-general of the British Travel Association is in Canada drumming up more tourist business for the United Kingdom. This looks like one of the most promising fields the Old Country could concentrate on in its search for more dollars.

Already the tourist industry is Britain's No. 1 dollar earner, according to Mr. Bridges. It outranks such leading items as textiles and Scotch whisky.

But most observers think it could be expanded very greatly.

And unlike practically any other export, this is one where there is little worry about competition, raw materials or saturation. Sales of this British product can be boosted indefinitely without arousing any friction in Canada or the United States and with little or no drain on British resources.

GLOBAL SURVEY

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press News Analyst

THE foreign ministers of the big three western allies—Britain, France and the United States—are meeting in Paris to consider ways and means of restoring the west German republic to a place in Europe's politico-economic sun.

Simultaneously, Russia has made the intriguing move of naming her distinguished Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky, as minister of defence in Poland. This appointment—referred to in diplomatic quarters in Washington as a "proconsulship"—may mean that Moscow is getting ready to withdraw her troops from eastern Germany, leaving that partly communized section of the Fatherland a theoretically "independent" state.

HOT CHESTNUT

These two developments, while having no direct relationship, strike me as being cut from the same piece of cloth. The German problem, as viewed either from east or west, is a hot chestnut to handle.

It seems logical to interpret the action of the western powers as tacit admission that a rehabilitated Germany is essential to the welfare of Europe as a whole. Just as at the time of the First World War British Prime Minister Lloyd George's cry of "hang the Kaiser" finally died on desert air, so the angry threats of reprisals against the instigator of the Second World War finally have given way to more studied counsel. It is recognized that hamstringing Germany also would be hamstringing the rest of Europe.

DIFFERENT VIEW

Russia probably is viewing the situation largely from a different standpoint. Eastern Germany isn't susceptible to absorption into the Soviet bloc without endless difficulties. Eastern Germany and western Germany will coalesce in due course unless they are kept down by military strength. That is the nature of the race. Therefore, since there would be no profit and much pain in trying to digest such an eastern Germany now, Moscow may plan on trying to gain favor with Germany by a military withdrawal.

Diplomatic observers also think Marshal Rokossovsky's assignment may be to strengthen Russia's military position in Poland, both with the idea of keeping that uneasy country in hand and of bolstering the western frontier of the Soviet bloc of satellites. In other words, the Soviet union would be consolidating its eastern bloc in recognition of the fact that Communist expansion westward has been halted by the western European Recovery Program.

CLIPPED at RANDOM

INDIAN GIVERS

T.D.F. in the Ottawa Citizen

Clem Attlee's government, which had been giving away all sorts of free stuff, is stiffening up on the generosity. It's like over on this side, where quiz shows are now down to rewarding the winner with only enough junk to fill one boxcar, instead of the whole train.

OUTSIDE OUTLASTS INSIDE

New York Times

The business news columns have been reporting on developments in men's spring clothing marts and up to a certain point the news has been good. It is possible that next spring men will be able to purchase suits in certain lines at prices $2.50 to $5 less than those prevailing last spring. But although there is much written about the material of which suits are made, and about its cost, nothing ever is said concerning the material from which pockets are constructed. A suit, no matter how fine, is no better than its pockets, a fact to which makers of men's clothes seem inexplicably to be blind.

Men's suits these days for the most part are well made; properly taken care of they last a long time, which is as it should be. Our worsteds, gabardines, flannels and tweeds wear so well, however, that pockets need patching long before sleeves fray at the elbows and seats of trousers begin to wear thin. This is so merely because men's clothing manufacturers consistently underestimate the stresses to which pockets are subjected.

The answer to the problem is a pocket that will outlast the suit, a pocket made of sailcloth, or pigskin, or chain mail. There must be thousands of men who gladly would forego the projected $2.50-$5 reduction in the price of spring suits if they could be assured of purchasing pockets that would not wear out.

End Of Budget Debate Took Conservatives By Surprise

OTTAWA (CP)—Main debate on the 1945-50 budget ended in the Commons Wednesday with a dramatic suddenness that caught many members, and particularly the Progressive Conservatives, by surprise.

The end came so quickly that the few Progressive Conservatives in the chamber at the time did not rise to ask for a formal vote on the party's amendment moved early in the debate on the budget reintroduced Oct. 20.

When Deputy Speaker J. A. Dion saw no one else wanted the floor he put the Progressive Conservative amendment to a voice vote and declared it defeated. The amendment was to a motion for the House to go into committee of ways and means to study resolutions to bills providing for the tax changes announced in the budget, Mr. Dion declared the main motion carried on a voice vote.

ARRIVED TOO LATE

At this point, George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, obviously flustered, rushed into the chamber, but was too late to call for a vote.

It was learned that Mr. Drew was in his office preparing a second speech on the budget. He had spoken earlier in the debate, but he was entitled to speak again before the debate ended. Notification that the debate was ending did not reach him fast enough to allow him to reach the Commons from his third-floor office to get the floor.

Sighed one Progressive Conservative:

"And to think that many of us were listening to the broadcast of the Ottawa-Montreal football game."

But other parliamentarians admitted that other than Progressive Conservative ears were listening to the Big Four playoff rather than to the speeches in the chamber, where new appeals were made for elimination of maritime grievances.

The amendment, moved Oct. 21 by Hon. Earl Rowe (P.C.-Dufferin-Simcoe, Ont.), asked that:

"This House regrets that the government has failed to take effective measures to prevent the present decline in our trade with the sterling area and is of the opinion that the government should consider the advisability of inviting the nations of the Commonwealth to a conference in the immediate future for the purpose of working out arrangements to preserve and enlarge those traditional markets on which jobs and opportunities for Canadians very largely depend."

VOTED WEEK AGO

About a week ago, the Commons voted 169 to 19 against a C.C.F. amendment calling for an immediate reduction of tariffs to encourage imports from the United Kingdom and other sterling areas.

Among the final speakers in the budget debate, John Blackmore (S.C.-Lethbridge), said the federal government should make grants to the provinces to enable them to rovide equality of educational opportunities for all children. The provinces alone did not have the means to provide such opportunities.

Bang-Bang, Nothing To It, Says Bear-Hunting Mother

CORBEIL, Ont. (CP) — You have to do things in a big way to get into the news at Corbeil.

The last time outsiders paid any attention to this little town, 10 miles east of North Bay, was 15 years ago, when Oliva Dionne's wife became a mother—not once but five times. Now the townsfolk are buzzing because Mrs. Melina Gauthier went bear-hunting last Monday.

All by herself, in slacks and rubber boots and with an old .44-calibre rifle, she went into the back fields of her husband's farm and shot four bears.

The slim, 34-year-old mother of eight children doesn't know what all the fuss is about. The bears were causing a lot of trouble, she explained, so she went out and shot them. The four carcasses were taken home and hung from a crossbar in front of the house, each neatly drilled through the head.

"I don't see how anyone should want to know how I shot those," said Mrs. Gauthier.

BETWEEN EYES

"First I found the den. Then I opened it up. There was a big mother bear in the entrance. She lumbered out of the hole. I shot her between the eyes.

"It must have weighed 250 pounds—it was six feet long. I tried to roll it aside as a cub rushed out. I shot that too. It weighed 150 pounds—some cub."

Two more cubs followed. Mrs. Gauthier got them too—bang, bang. The last one was tougher. She shot him three times in a wild chase over two acres of pasture and brush before she dropped him.

That's all there was to it. Mrs. Gauthier is back home, looking after those eight children. And the menfolk in Corbeil, who were planning a little shooting party before she beat them to it, have something to talk about as winter sets in.

Labor Brief Asks Compensation Board Office In Victoria

A Workmen's Compensation Board office in Victoria to receive and handle claims for the southern part of Vancouver Island was urged in the Victoria and District Trades and Labor Council brief to the Workmen's Compensation Act inquiry.

A. P. Rayment, secretary-treasurer, submitted the brief before Chief Justice Gordon McG. Sloan, Wednesday.

Among his recommendations were:

Raising maximum amount on which compensation is based from $2,500 to $3,500;

Compensation of $80 a month instead of $50 for widows with $17.50 for each child up to 18 years;

Treatment by qualified chiropractic and naturopathic practitioners be made available to injured workers without reference to a medical doctor;

Blanket coverage for all workers;

Provision of occupational therapy.

Mr. Rayment urged more regular payment of compensation cheques to injured workers and asked for a minimum of $25 a week to be paid to workers who meet with an accident. Systematic inspection and rigid enforcement of safety measures was also stressed.

SPECIAL CASES

Discussing special cases, Mr. Rayment told of one, John Godber who was refused compensation on the grounds that his claim was not made within a year. The man in question injured his eye, but kept on working, according to Mr. Rayment. As a result of the injury the eye had to be removed, but while the Workmen's Compensation Board paid doctor and hospital bills, no compensation was paid.

He told of another worker on 100 per cent compensation owing to loss of eyesight who was killed while crossing a railway track. His widow receives nothing, Mr. Rayment said.

At the morning sitting John Arthur Wild presented a brief on behalf of Jack W. Love, who asked that compensation pensions such as his granted in the 30's be raised in accordance with the standard of wages which would be paid in his trade today.

Thomas Connelly, a provincial civil servant, made a brief submission in which he asked some benefits for men injured prior to the Compensation Act, but who have paid into compensation since the act came into force.

Indifference Shown To Inquiry Scored By Commissioner

People and organizations who clamor for a public inquiry and then fail to bring forth submissions, were scored by Chief Justice Gordon McG. Sloan at the Wednesday sitting of the commission of inquiry into the B.C. Workmen's Compensation Act.

"It seems to be like this in all these public inquiries," said the commissioner. "There is a great public clamoring to get underway and once you get started everyone loses interest.

"These sittings were especially advertised in almost every newspaper in the province for weeks on end and when we get here we find about three briefs ready for presentation."

Chief Justice Sloan mentioned that he had to take two weeks from his judicial duties "to make at least some reasonable dent in this thing."

"But we are meeting what seems to be the usual inertia in these things. It seems to me we should be given enough grist to keep the inquiry open after they have sought it."

He stressed that his remarks were addressed not to counsel and representatives of groups present at the sittings here but those organizations who want to be heard, yet hold off sending in briefs.

Sittings concluded this forenoon.

The commission is scheduled tentatively to begin sittings in Vancouver, Dec. 12. The date however, is not definite.

To Receive Charter

DUNCAN—The newly-formed Duncan Zenith Gyro Club will be presented with its charter at the Plaza Hotel, Nanaimo, Thursday night.

Members of the Real Estate Board of Victoria are asked to close their offices tomorrow (Remembrance Day).

Opponents Agree Somebody Must Pay For Compensation

Opponents were in accord on one point at least in the B.C. Workmen's Compensation Act inquiry at the courthouse Wednesday.

"If present day industry successfully contends it cannot justly be charged with costs of previous accidents, then some social avenue must be found from which a socially inflicted injustice will be, even at this late date, remedied," said Harold E. Winch, C.C.F. leader of the opposition in his brief.

During his cross-examination by Senator J. W. deB. Farris, Mr. Winch said if industry could not pay, then he felt the money should come out of consolidated revenue.

"I think it is a good place to end since we are in agreement," remarked Senator Farris.

Chief Justice Gordon McG. Sloan, commissioner, said he had expressed an opinion in his 1942 report along those lines.

"Seven years have gone by and nothing was done," he observed.

Plea for briefs to be submitted in the early days of the inquiry was made by J. W. Heffernan, commission counsel at the opening of today's sitting.

Chief Justice Sloan said he felt sure all would try to facilitate the work of the commission by handing in briefs early.

Nehru Booed By Indian Students

LONDON (AP)—Leftist Indian students Wednesday night booed their prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru.

A short time later the Indian leader told a meeting of the India League that the students were "merely shouting themselves hoarse." He said they brought no credit to India.

They are members of an Indian association at odds with Nehru's government.

Nehru is spending a few days here, breaking his trip from Canada and the United States to India.

He was received in audence by the King at Buckingham Palace Wednesday. He also lunched with Prime Minister Attlee at 10 Downing Street.

Winston Churchill, leader of the opposition, and Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, attended the luncheon.

Informed sources said Nehru has discussed recognition of the Chinese Communist regime with Attlee and Sir Stafford. One source said it is expected the Indian leader will announce recognition of Red China soon after he returns home.

Also discussed with Sir Stafford and Attlee, the sources said, was the question of India's sterling balance.

Singer Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Nargit Bokor, 44, former leading lyric soprano at the Viennese State Opera, died Wednesday.

Chicken Pox

VANCOUVER (CP) — Metropolitan health officials said Wednesday night that chicken pox incidence has reached an all-time high of 2,118 cases for the year.

Early spring produced the most cases—the total at June's end was 2,014—compared with 862 for the 12-month period 10 years ago.

Officials said an increased birthrate and larger entries in primary grade schools contributed to the increase.

My Three Years In Moscow

By Lieut.-Gen. Walter Bedell Smith

favor Germany as against France and Britain, and when he replaced Litvinov as Minister of Foreign Affairs in 1939, a change in Soviet policy was confidently expected, since it has been usual Soviet practice to change men when policy changes. Accordingly the failure of the poorly handled last-minute Anglo-French military mission to Moscow could have been no surprise to the relatively few informed observers of the Soviet scene.

Molotov is credited with having engineered the German-Soviet nonaggression pact, which followed a few weeks later and which he described as having made narrower the zone of possible military conflicts in Europe.

Like nearly all important Soviet officials, Molotov, so far as foreigners know, is without redeeming minor vices. He has none of the human qualities of humor or sudden anger that make Vishinsky rather attractive among a class of officials who are rigidly correct and reserved in their relation to foreigners. He is usually coldly self-possessed.

On occasions, when irritated or in difficulty during a debate, he stammers noticeably. Only once have I seen him really flustered. When the Kasenkina affair occurred, Molotov's secretary called me shortly before midnight and asked me to come to the Foreign Office.

Confusion

I must have arrived sooner than expected, as Molotov's outer office, usually a model of orderly quiet, was in considerable confusion. However, I was admitted to his conference room after a wait of only about five minutes. I could see that the paper from which he read his official protest was a hastily marked up first draft, with many corrections. His stammer was very pronounced and he was obviously angry and disturbed, understandably so, since, as head of the Foreign Office, he was officially responsible for the consulate from which Mme. Kasenkina escaped.

We had a very sharp exchange for a few minutes, as I denied his allegation of United States Government complicity in what he called "the activities of White Guards and bandits" who had "lured away and captured" Mme. Kasenkina.

Before the conference ended, however, he had recovered his poise and was again the self-possessed and correct Foreign Minister.

Most foreign observers have identified Molotov directly with the hardening of Soviet policy toward the West. My own impression is that there really was a decided difference of opinion in the Politburo concerning relations with the West. I believe that there is a moderate group that wishes closer understanding for the reason that the Soviet Union needs a period of peace of at least 10 to 15 years to reconstruct its economy and consolidate the enormous gains made during the war. I do not mean by this that these "moderates" would renounce the basic Soviet objective of communist world domination through world revolution but simply that they believe more time is required to prepare for the clashes that this policy envisages.

Constant Pressure

Opposed to this, a stronger militant group supports the Molotov policy of constant pressure, aggressive action and intransigence. Beria and, until his death, Zhdanov were thought to be of this faction, while Malenkov was estimated by foreigners in Moscow to be more moderate in his views, although the amount of information about him is so limited, and his foreign contacts have been so slight, that it would be difficult to prove this theory.

Whatever the reason, it is evident that events that preceded Zhdanov's death last year reflected some discord in the ranks of the Politburo.

Georgi M. Malenkov is still in his forties and, in my opinion, is the outstanding personality of the younger generation of Bolsheviks. He has been a member of the Communist Party since 1920. He became an alternate member of the Politburo in 1941, at the same time as Beria, and in 1946, also with Beria, he was made a full member.

He was once Stalin's private secretary, and it was Stalin himself who trained Malenkov to handle the administrative machinery of the Communist party, entrusting him little by little with important party functions. In 1939, when only 37, Malenkov was elected a member of the Central Committee of the Communist party and in 1946 he became one of the secretaries of the Central Committee of the party, the other secretaries of which are now Stalin, Suslov, Popov and Ponomarenko.

In spite of the enormous responsibilities he carried during the war as reorganizer of the aircraft industry and later as president of the committee for restoration of liberated areas, he has never given up direction of the Orgburo or of the administration of personnel of the Central Committee. These two party agencies give him control of the appointments of all major party officials and the opportunity to place talented supporters in key positions. Thus he followed the same road to power previously taken by Stalin.

Expressionless Face

Malenkov is fat and flabby-looking, with a round, expressionless face. Mentally, he is anything but flabby, as his impressive accomplishments during the war, in a series of positions of great responsibility, give ample evidence. As Stalin's principal "party man," he always appears in the now very much out-moded party "uniform," with drab-colored coat, buttoned up to the throat, with a turned-down collar. His infrequent public statements have been forceful, sensible and realistic.

Malenkov has had his ups and downs. He seems to have been removed from the Secretariat of the Central Committee in 1947 after having been appointed thereto, and he reappeared in that capacity in mid-July of 1948. This reappearance, which marked the beginning of the end for Zhdanov, placed him again in the inner circle of Stalin's advisers, together with Beria and Molotov.

These three, Molotov, Malenkov and Beria, now represent the most important functions of Soviet Government: Molotov, as first vice premier and Stalin's principal lieutenant for many years, has vast experience in the field of foreign relations; Malenkov has the party machinery, and Beria, who rose with Malenkov in the party, has the apparatus of state security and the secret police—the cement that holds together the whole great pyramid of the Soviet political structure.

Underground Work

Lavrenti P. Beria, like Stalin, is a Georgian. Like Malenkov, he is still relatively young — he will be 50 this year. He joined the Communist party in 1917, did important underground work in Baku and Azerbaijan during the civil war and headed the Soviet security organization in the Caucasus from 1921 to 1929 and from 1929 was Georgian Commissar for Internal Affairs. Thereafter he became party secretary of the Caucasus area, a post that he held for seven years.

As the principal party official in this area of mixed nationalities, he performed noteworthy service, and he holds the Orders of the Red Banner of both the Georgian and Azerbaijanian Soviet Republics and the coveted Order of Lenin. In 1934, he was elected a member of the Central Committee of the Communist party, and in the summer of 1938, when the great purge was at its height, with the party shaken to its foundations, terror rampant and leadership in industry and the army in a state of moral collapse, he was made vice chief of the N.K.V.D., (predecessor of the M.V.D., or secret police) second in command to Yezhov (whom he replaced five months later), with the mission of restoring the situation.

Fatal Job

The job of head of the secret police had been a fatal one. A series of Beria's predecessors went from that position of power to meet the fate that each, in his turn, had inflicted on so many others.

Beria, however, was as different in personality from such men as Yezhov, Yagoda and Dzherzhinsky as he was in appearance. He looks like a teacher or a scientist, with high forehead, steady eyes and a firm mouth. His expression is calm and reserved. Although he has the rank of Marshal of the Soviet Union, I have rarely seen him in uniform, and few pictures of him in uniform are published.

After the war, during which he again performed distinguished service in connection with increasing the production of arms and munitions, he was awarded the decoration of Hero of Socialist Labor. In 1947, he became one of the vice premiers and he resigned from his duties as Minister for Internal Affairs in January, 1946.

Presumably, his principal duties in the Politburo are supervision of the Ministries of Internal and State Security, the M.G.B. and M.V.D. with their widespread activities and large military strength of highly disciplined and politically reliable troops, is and out of uniform. This probability is reinforced by the fact that both these ministries, primarily concerned with the enforcement of internal security, are headed by minor personalities who have been closely associated in a subordinate capacity with Beria for years.

Loyal To Chief

Beria has also been one of Stalin's closest associates for many years, and his personal loyalty to his chief is unquestioned. In return, Stalin has demonstrated his complete confidence in Beria on so many occasions that Beria's prestige in the inner party circle cannot be doubted. He is rumored to have been made responsible for all atomic research and development.

The stability of the Soviet regime depends to a large extent on a powerful and efficient police system, and Beria has demonstrated his ability to cope with any problem involving the security of the state.

These three men — Molotov, Malenkov and Beria—represent, respectively, foreign policy and general direction of the governmental machine, party policy and organization and internal security. Malenkov, the party man, may also become responsible for general supervision of Soviet economy, a field in which he has had experience. Or, since the death of his rival, Zhdanov, he may have inherited the all-important function of directing, under Stalin, the party's ideological policy.

Two other members of the Politburo, whose influence seems now to be somewhat less than that of the big three, are also closely associated with Stalin and likewise have major responsibilities. These are Bulganian and Kaganovitch.

Brilliant Speaker

Bulganin is the Politburo member now most directly identified with matters of national defense. He is about 54 and a veteran of the civil war. Originally a factory worker, he developed into an able administrator and executive and a brilliant speaker.

I have met Bulganin only casually at large social functions, where he was distantly courteous. His appearance is attractive, as he is well groomed, faultlessly turned out in his new uniform of a Marshal of the Soviet Union and rather handsome. Incidentally, he wears a goatee—the only one in the Politburo. The few foreigners who have dealt with him have thought him reasonable, intelligent and able.

When Stalin resigned the portfolio of Minister of Defense to Bulganin, the latter's prestige rose greatly and it was further enhanced by his promotion to Marshal.

I have read arguments that his selection for the post of Minister o fArmed Forces was an indication that the Soviet Union was less aggressive in a military sense than some foreigners believe, for the reason that he is an executive and administrator rather than a professional soldier.

I do not think this argument is valid. Stalin unquestionably thinks of himself as the first strategist of the Soviet Union, and he is, as his title of Generalissimo indicates, the supreme commander of the Soviet Armed Forces. Bulganin's particular qualifications were exactly those required for the ministerial position.

Trouble-Shooter

Kaganovitch, the "Iron Commissar" and Stalin's trouble-shooter, is still young enough to have an important future. He is usually referred to as the only Jew in the Politburo, but this may not be correct, as Beria, the Georgian is also remored to be Jewish although no confirmation of this fact has been revealed.

Kaganovitch is the best administrator in the Soviet Union. He has been shifted from place to place wherever great executive ability is needed and has always turned in an outstanding performance. He is another remarkable example of the ability of the Bolsheviks to select talent, because Kaganovitch was a shoemaker in the Ukraine and was still a shoe-maker when he joined the Communist party in 1911. Seven years later he was playing a major role in the organization of the Red Army.

These rulers of the Soviet Union are united in purpose and they are loyal to Stalin. Such internal differences as have developed among them are personal and have not militated against the party unity and loyalty, nor will they while Stalin lives and retains the general control of Soviet policy. His enormous authority and prestige and all his associates work together harmoniously under the guidance of the inner circle of advisers whose names I have mentioned.

Avoid Great Cost

It is to this inner circle that Stalin must look when he remembers the crisis through which the party passed after Lenin's death and the struggle for power from which he himself emerged victorious at such great cost to the Soviet Union, and when he plans, as undoubtedly he has, to prevent the repetition of this crisis. Stalin is well aware that since rumors of the deterioration of his health became rife, the outside world has speculated wildly on what would happen when he was no longer able to rule, and it is inconceivable that he has not taken measures to prevent another political crisis and another struggle for power.

Stalin's struggle for power was within the party, and he won it by the simple and direct tactic of exterminating the opposition.

Americans would do well to ponder that fact—"he won it by the simple and direct tactic of exterminating the opposition." For Americans, with their habit of accepting the November election result every four years on the Presidency without the slightest hesitation despite the heated charges and countercharges of campaign oratory, it is difficult to grasp the full import of those words.

Political Vacuum

When Stalin disappears from the political scene, there may be an opportunity for one or more ambitious leaders within the party to attempt, by the same methods, to extend their own authority. A dictatorship is usually so organized about the personality of the dictator that when he dies a political vacuum occurs, and the release of violent unpredictable forces is likely to take place.

The feeling is so strong in many quarters outside the Soviet Union that the pattern of the Stalin-Trotsky struggle must inevitably repeat itself after Stalin dies that it has strongly influenced some national foreign policies. It must be remembered, however, that toward the end of the war, most observers of the Soviet scene believed that it would be impossible for the party to re-establish complete control over the Army, whose victorious leaders had become veritable demigods to the Soviet people.

Important changes appeared inevitable. Great concessions had been made by the party to the people during the war years, and the war-weary people seemed to be in no mood to relinquish them. Nothing like this happened. The party maintained its dominant position, apparently without the slightest difficulty.

Great military leaders like Zhukov, whose ideas about co-operation with the West presumably conflicted with the "Molotov" policy, disappeared from the Moscow scene to posts of relative obscurity so quietly that it was hardly noticed.

A new series of five-year plans and a drastic currency reform were inaugerated, and the party recaptured all the concessions it had been forced to make during the strained years of war. The leadership and structure of the regime underwent no significant changes.

One Thing Certain

Long-range predictions regarding an organization about which so little is known as is known about the Politburo are certainly dangerous, but one thing is certain. As long as Stalin lives he will continue to assert supreme authority; therefore, he is not likely to vest a major measure of power to any one person. The responsibilities he centralized in his own hands during the war, he now appears to be dividing among those close associates whose personal loyalty to himself has been most thoroughly tested. The ones who now seem to be sharing the major portion of this delegated power are Molotov, Malenkov, and Beria.

It is inconceivable to me that any single one of these men can take Stalin's place. During the war years his stature became so great that it dwarfed all of his associates. His mantle is now too large for any one of them to wear.

My own belief is that when Stalin dies his power will be divided among these three. Or possibly, there may be associated with them the two others who appear to be next to them in prestige — Kaganovitch and Bulganin. As they are now carrying out his general directions, so they would, after his death, carry on the fuctions of his dictatorship.

Personal Ambitions

The question whether, when that time comes, personal antagonism and ambitions, suppressed in Stalin's presence, may assert themselves and disturb the co-operative relationship, is impossible to answer. Although it is true that the Soviet regime, like other dictatorships, is linked with the personality of its leader, the fact remains that because it is basically dictatorship by committee, this is less significant in the Soviet Union than it has been elsewhere.

However, I think it is quite likely that one or more of the directorate that succeeeds Stalin, or even some new leader whose name is still unknown, eventually will be tempted to make a bid for supreme power.

But I believe also that no struggle is likely to occur that is any way commensurate with the battle of giants that took place after Lenin's death. This, it will be remembered, was at a time when the Soviet Union was far less strong, and the Communist party much less firmly entrenched than now, after the successful trial of a great war; but the system, though seriously shaken then, was not disastrously damaged.

Insured To Purges

In its present day of strength, a palace revolution might hardly cause a ripple on the surface of Soviet political life, and the Soviet people are inured to political purges.

Other nations have, in the past, been governed by a minority class, and though one palace revolution after another has gradually weakened their political structures, these have nevertheless endured for generations, and even for centuries. I am convinced that we must, for many years to come, accept the Politburo as a force to be reckoned with.

Dr. McKENNEY ON BRIDGE

RESOURCEFUL DOUBLE SETS A CLEVER TRAP

No visit to the Cavendish Club in New York would be complete without a hand from Howard Schenken and today's hand is one he gave to me the other night.

One of Schenken's greatest assets is his personality. He is very quiet, but daring and resourceful. He is very considerate of his partner and he never puts too great a problem up to him unless he is quite sure he can figure it out.

In this particular rubber, Schenken's opponents had been holding all the cards and he was behind. As the bidding on today's hand proceeded he knew that they had a pretty sure slam. South's jump to two hearts after passing indicated that he had a minimum of five hearts. When North supported the heart bid, Schenken felt sure he had at least four hearts. When North bid seven diamonds and South had shown the ace of clubs, he felt quite confident that now they would make it. There was only one possible chance for him to salvage this hand. That was to give North a chance to make a mistake. In doubling seven diamonds Schenken knew he was only risking 190 points as opponents seldom redouble a grand slam contract.

Schenken said he did not think that North had a solid diamond suit. If he could give North the impression that he held a diamond trick he figured that North might easily go to seven hearts feeling that maybe that was a safer contract. Well, you will have to admit it was a good gamble.

North fell into the trap and did bid seven hearts, which Schenken doubled. West, Schenken's partner, opened a small diamond which Schenken ruffed. I doubt if there are many rubber bridge players in the country who would have attempted this strategy, but that is the type of strategy which makes Schenken the outstanding bridge player he is.

ROYAL THEATRE

In the picture studios, "One hour for lunch!" usually means a rush for the commissary.

But in "Colorado Territory," now being shown at the Royal Theatre, at Warner Bros., the line happened to be part of the script. Oliver Blake, as a Wells Fargo agent, stepped to the door of his stagecoach station and greeted incoming passengers with, "One hour for lunch."

Eleven other offenders were fined $5 each.

Missionary Watches Indian Women's Emancipation

With two decades of medical and evangelistic mission work in India behind her, Miss Lily Simpson has come home to Canada on a year's furlough.

But her idea of a vacation does not include long, restful days of doing nothing.

The missionary nurse, with the Presbyterian Church in Canada, has a full-time program mapped out.

Since she arrived by plane from India, she has been speaking to various church groups, describing her work in the mission hill station at Landoui in United Provinces.

"I've seen many changes there in the past 20 years," she says.

"Perhaps the most thrilling was the change in women's standards.

"I've watched their gradual emergence from the confining shelter of their homes, to take part in mission work and become interested in their surroundings, until now thousands upon thousands of young Indian women are making a place for themselves in the business world."

Born in England, Miss Simpson spent her earlier years in Weyburn, Sask., and took her nurse's training in Saint John, N.B.

Then her interest in mission work gradually crowded out her nursing career, and in 1928 she left for India.

She has remained at her post, with the exception of furloughs homes, and a year spent in British Guiana.

Miss Simpson left yesterday for Vancouver, where she will visit her mother, Mrs. D. W. Simpson and sister, Mrs. Edith Hunter. She plans to take a three-month observation course in Vancouver General Hospital.

To Open Bazaar

Mrs. Percy E. George, wife of Victoria's mayor, will officially open the bazaar and tea to be given by the Canadian Daughters' League in Newstead Hall on Monday at 2 p.m. Mrs. W. Ledingham is general convener of the affair. There will be stalls of home cooking and candy, aprons, and needlework, also a white elephant stall. Afternoon tea will be served and a whist game has been arranged in the evening.

Thrift Shop Changes Hours

Junior Auxiliary to Royal Jubilee Hospital were told by Mrs. Gordon Abernethy when they met in the Nurses' Home, with Mrs. R. S. O'Meara in the chair, that the Thrift Shop will change hours on Saturday and be open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. It was also noted that used toys are needed at the shop.

An appeal was made for magazines for hospitals and for books and magazines for the nurses' sitting-room. Mrs. C. F. Moseley and Mrs. M. Castle decorated Christmas trees in the hospital.

Mrs. Harold Webster, general convener of the Dolls' Bazaar and Jamboree, reported that net proceeds were $2,200.

Mrs. O'Meara was delegated to attend the B.C. Hospital Association meeting in Vancouver.

It was announced that regular Monday work meetings would be canceled until the new year.

Ottawa Girl Studies Ministry

MONTREAL (CP) — McGill University's faculty of divinity is the only such faculty in Canada where students for the Anglican and United Church ministers share joint lectures.

If this is surprising, then the fact that one of the students is a girl should be even more surprising.

Margaret Mann of Ottawa now is in the second year of a two-year course. She will not be the only United Church woman minister in Canada but her sister ministers will be few. Fourteen have been ordained since Lydia E. Gruchy was admitted to the ministry in 1936.

She is the first girl to register in McGill divinity faculty and although the faculty is only one year old, Margaret is in her second year.

She qualified for second year due to her work at the United Church training school at Emmanuel College, Toronto, and at Union Theological College, New York.

She is the only member in her family to enter the ministry. Her father is a retired farmer.

Miss Mann says she thinks the field for women in the ministry is increasing because there are "some things women can do better."

Soroptimists Plan Christmas Parcels

Members of Soroptomist Club of Greater Victoria met in clubrooms in the Williams Bilding, recently, and prepared TB Christmas seals for mailing. Under convenership of Alice Kimmit, members are mailing 22,500 TB seal envelopes in Greater Victoria this year.

Donations of money and canned foods were received from members for Christmas parcels to be sent to England. Arrangements were made for a rummage sale to be held Nov. 26 in the Public Market.

Miss Ella Walker, vice-president, was in the chair.

In Step With Style

By MARGUERITE DALZIEL
Women's Department, Victoria Times

If you're a woman or girl who habitually moves with dignity, the attractive dresses with flying panels, maypole skirts and overdresses—three of the most talked-of features seen in London fashion collections—are definitely for you. But if you are a person of very quick movement who has a habit of running rather than walking, leave well alone and select a dress without extraneous pieces.

For it is important that the wearer learn to manage a dress from which loose panels are flying, to avoid the danger that they will look merely messy. They can easily become crumpled, for instance, and even more easily torn.

These extremely formal styles however show many possibilities. For instance, panels may be removed when you tire of the style, or when it is one which is not likely to last.

That will leave a well-cut, elegant dress, which can be worn on many occasions.

One more point. These panels can hide a multitude of defects, and even if you are on the plump side, you may be able to wear them, as long as the point from which they are draped is carefully chosen.

It must be neither too long nor too short, for the wrong length can make a badly-turned ankle look thicker; the right length, by giving a glimpse of the turn of the calf, can give an impression of greater slimness.

Also important is the choice of shoes.

Most women will find that a classic pump shoe helps the effect of slim elegance, while a strapped shoe cuts the line of the leg just where it should not. Again, a too large and elaborately trimmed hat may spoil the effect by making the wearer look overdressed.

As a rule, the panels or overdress are sufficient trimming and a small hat will be found to be best.

* * *

In local shops look for—Attractive English and French imports in soft, well-fitting doeskin gloves, six-button length.

A new disguise is given a slim dress by floating panels. Mary Black, London designer, uses fine wool for this tailored dress with panels cut in one with the bolero.

Suede gloves, favored for fall and winter; most popular color tones, greens, greys, cocoa bark, black.

Camois gloves, wrist length for suits and topcoats.

Nylon shortee gloves this season in grey, spinach green, copper bark; many with self-covered button trim.

For this spring, easily laundered and fast drying nylon tops the list.

Next season's glove shipment to local shops will include nylon shortee gloves with lacy inserts and pert mesh trims.

White gloves reach an all-time high in popularity this coming season.

READING MAY BECOME A SUPREME DELIGHT

Since the aim of this department is to make child-rearing easier for the parent and to achieve happier children it is always gratifying to know when suggestions have hit the target and have been helpful.

Here is an old-time reader of the column who has some wise words of advice which I am happy to print.

"I haven't a single question," writes Mrs. L. D., "but I did want to tell you how many times in the past you have helped me with my 20-year-old son and 12-year-old daughter. Now, I am writing to express my appreciation for the article you wrote on fostering a child's love of reading.

"So many persons miss much of the joy of life because they have not been taught to read. I am amazed when I hear a mother boast, within hearing of the child, that her family never "wastes" time in reading. Such a mother and father, never realize how they are handicapping their children by failing to show them the enjoyment to be had through reading. These children find school work difficult and usually drop out of any conversation that touches anything above the level of everyday living.

"As I am a Sunday School superintendent, I am very much interested in everything concerning children. We very soon discover those fortunate children who have been taught to love reading. We have a good library in our town and we, as a family, certainly use it. I hope your article inspires parents to give thought to this subject."

Thank you so much for writing to me and for your long loyalty to the column. I endeavor, as a person, to understand the viewpoint of the adult who prefers working with his or her hands rather than engaging in the passive enjoyment of reading. But since almost all school subjects are taught from the printed page, it is serious when children are never encouraged to read for amusement, for knowledge, for an understanding of human beings and the world in which they live. They can't get all of that single-handed without resort to newspapers, magazines and books.

The habit of reading begins early and it is a real joy to introduce children to literature and find that they, with many past generations, discover for themselves the value in it. A book a week may seem to be a task, to the 10 to 12-year-old, it soon becomes a supreme delight.

A Reader: It is unnecessary to put a pillow in the bed of any child under five years of age. It is a possible danger to the small child who might pull it over his head and smother. If the child's head needs elevating slip a folded towel or diaper inside a small case and this will serve admirably.

Our leaflet No. 79, "Books for Children," suggests some of the timeless favorites. It may be had by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Stop That Run--- Not With Polish

BEBINGTON, Cheshire, Eng. (CP)—"Women who use nail varnish to stop a stocking run may be sorry," says E. V. Crapper, chief sanitary inspector for Bebington.

"Varnish often contains tricresyl phosphate to stop it from cracking and this can cause dermatitis. Infections from this chemical can occur even when a woman only touches her own or someone else's skin."

Mr. Crapper has asked the Sanitary Inspectors' Association to have cosmetics covered by the Food and Drugs Act so that it would be possible to keep such substances from being used in nail varnish.

"We are considering what can be done," said an official. "But this tricresyl phosphate is the best for making nail varnish crack-proof."

Dorothy Dix

Dear Dorothy Dix—My mother and father accuse me of being ashamed of them because I object to their sitting in the living room whenever I have company. It isn't that at all, because I love my parents and am proud of them, but don't you think that a girl should have a little privacy when she entertains her boy friends? SALLY.

Answer—I certainly do, and I don't thing any girl's family is giving her a square deal unless they provide her with some place where she can receive her beaux out of earshot of her curious relatives, and safe from the maraudings of little brother and sister.

It isn't that the young people if left alone would do or say anything wrong. It is just that the presence of their elders cramps their style. They want to be silly and giggle and laugh, and they can't do that with the family gallery all about.

The parents who are not willing to give up the living-room to Sally may well reflect that they are doing all they can to make her an old maid, for no youth is going to pay a return call on a girl when he has to spend the evening in the bosom of her family.

* * *

Dear Miss Dix: I am a woman of 45 and am thinking of running for public office. Some of my friends think it is foolish. Others think it is a good idea as long as my maid could look after my home and children. What do you think of women being in public office?

M. D.

Answer: No reason in the world why a woman should not hold public office if the position she seeks is one that she is fitted to fill and she can get elected to it. But the way to any public office is a thorny one to tread and one filled with heart-burnings and anxieties. Before you reach your goal you will be bruised and battered by the hard knocks you get and you will have lost many a friend, so think long before you give up your peaceful home for politics.

As for women pursuing a political or any other type of career, I think the determining factor is always how much they are needed at home. Certainly no woman who has little children, or adolescent children who need their mother far more than babies do, has any right to pursue a career unless she is absolutely driven to it by financial necessity. Her job is in her own home. That is the one that God is going to hold her responsible for, and woe to her if she is a quitter.

No hired servant, however competent they may be, can take the place of a mother, because the mother gives children something that is necessary to their deevlopment which no other human being can give them. It takes mother love, mother patience, mother understanding to solve the problems of little souls and steer young lives in the right direction.

And a woman who has a good husband is foolish to swap him off for a career. Of course, most women don't intend to do this. They think they can have their cake and eat it, too, and that husband will stay put while they are off campaigning or lecturing or what not. But he doesn't. Some other woman always gets him, and only too often the woman finds out that the career has failed and her husband has been lost, too.

* * *

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am engaged to a wonderful girl. We would be so happy except for my mother, who never leaves us alone a minute that she can help. She has three other sons, but she concentrates on me and clings to me like a leech.

Now I love my mother dearly, but I would like to be able to go out with my fiancee alone, without Mother always tagging along. My girl friend says that she is fed up with Mom's company, but what can I do to shake Mother? I don't want to hurt her feelings.

A SON.

Answer—The only thing you can do is to have a very frank talk with your mother and tell her that she is ruining your life. Tell her that you want to be alone with your sweetheart. Ask her if she doesn't remember her own courting days when three was a crowd?

There is no more insoluble problem in the world than the mother who is a spiritual parasite on her children.

* * *

Dear Miss Dix: How is the best way to start a conversation with a boy and hold his attention?

RUBY AND JEANETTE.

Answer: Ask him questions about the things he is interested in, if you know what they are. If he is a stranger you have never met before, dial around the topics until you find some theme song to which he responds. Politics, what's in the news, new books, the last movie, a popular play, sports, automobiles, travel, all are likely subjects. If he answers briefly, try another on him.

Most boys have a very limited range of interest. Themselves, whatever sport they like best, their work and their dates are about the only things they can talk about, but once you get them started on their favorite topic of what "I said" and "he said" and what "I did and didn't do," they are garrulous.

But never talk to a boy about yourself. That bores him stiff.

Scientists Won't Disclose Aborigines Tribal Secrets

By ANTHONY WHITLOCK

DARWIN (CP) — A team of Australian scientists and an American photographer left civilization last August to explore a remote part of Australia's great Northern Territory and to record the social secrets of a primitive tribe of Australian aborigines.

The party recently emerged from this tropical land of salt pans, crocodile-infested rivers and desert with nothing to show for their journey.

Back at Australia's most northern port, the scientists, headed by Professor Adolphus P. Elkin, noted Sydney University anthropologist, told the white community that they could not reveal anything of what they had learned about tribal rites because they had promised the natives they would keep their secrets.

REOPENS MYSTERY

Their attitude reopens one of Australia's strangest mysteries concerning life in the far outback. Northern Territory people who have spent their lives in this lonely land know of similar scientific missions which set out to discover tribal secrets but returned with sealed lips.

The territory people remember the scientist from the Adelaide Museum who lived with the blacks for seven years so that civilization would know the facts about tribal rites. He finally captured the blacks' confidence so much that they initiated him into the tribe. Two years later he returned to Adelaide but refused to tell anyone the secrets he had learned.

Australia's well-known outback poet, Walliam Harney, has written hundreds of poems about the blacks in the territory but has never betrayed the secrets he knows. He says he would never dare discuss them with a white man.

'SACRED,' SAYS AUTHOR

Xavier Herbert, who won the Australian 150th anniversary novel prize with his book on the territory called "Capricornia," won't talk about the tribal secrets either. Like Harney he has lived with the natives for years. But to inquirers he says gruffly: "They are too sacred. Mind your own business."

No one knows what it is about the aborigine or his rites which makes scientists, journalists or novelists keep the secret. There are 13,000 full-blooded blacks living in the 523,620 square miles of the Northern Territory. Australians know that they wander through the country without making any attempt to grow crops, that they are the best trackers in the world and that their social code is strict and often harsh.

Gaelic Becoming Forgotten Language

INVERNESS (CP) — The Gaelic tongue is becoming a forgotten language in Scotland due to the drift of population from the Highlands and islands to the big cities, Dr. John Cameron said in a presidential address to the National Mod.

Scotland's population had risen from 1,500,000 to 5,000,000 in the last 150 years, but the growth was almost entirely in the industrial belt. The outlying areas had been stripped of younger people who preferred city life.

Because a good command of English was thought to be of supreme importance Gaelic is "retreating with alarming rapidity behind the bastions of the Outer Isles," Dr. Cameron said.

Industrial developments scheduled in the Highlands were unlikely to stimulate an interest in Gaelic.

"In my opinion, it is only youth that can now save our language, and the place for formal instruction of youth is the school. . . . It should be made possible for any child in the Highland area to begin the study of Gaelic at such age as expediency and the circumstances of the area demand."

Present Scout Medal For Long Service

GANGES — Provincial Scout Commissioner T. W. S. Parsons and R. Ken Jordan, executive commissioner, presented the Long Service Medal for faithful service in scouting to Archdeacon G. H. Holmes at a ceremony which was held in the Mahon Hall Monday.

Scouts, Guides and Cubs were in attendance with their leaders.

Following the presentation, official films of the Ottawa Jamboree were shown as well as films showing activities of the local Scouts. Mr. Parsons and Mr. Jordan were entertained at a dinner in Harbor House Hotel by the Scout group committee.

Health Minister At Ganges Luncheon

GANGES—Work on rebuilding the main highway between Fulford and Ganges would start next spring, Health and Welfare Minister George S. Pearson told a luncheon meeting in Harbor House given by a committee under Gavin C. Mouat.

The committee also brought up the question of improved ferry service to Salt Spring Island and need for a government liquor store.

Says Many Ward 5 Residents Do Not Want Secession

"It is certainly not the wish of many people in the area." That was the comment of Councillor K. R. Genn, of Saanich Council, Wednesday in regard to a petition received by Municipal Affairs Minister R. C. MacDonald, asking for secession of the entire Ward Five area from Saanich.

The minister said a delegation of Ward Five ratepayers had applied for secession.

"There was opposition to any such move lodged before, but there will be a new petition opposing secession for the area," Mr. Genn said.

Delegation meeting the minister was headed by H. C. Oldfield.

While Mr. MacDonald said the petition would receive consideration he had earlier pointed out that he would consider a request from Ward Five for seccesion of that part of the area north of Elk Lake. He was opposed to the more settled area south of the lake breaking away from Saanich.

Ward Six's petition for secession is awaiting government decision.

COLWOOD — Colwood Scout and Guide Committee will hold its annual meeting in Colwood Community Hall at 8 in the evening of Nov. 30.

SMOOTH-RIDING TRACTOR SEAT—How to take the jerks and bumps out of tractor driving has plagued engineers for years. This new tractor seat with a pair of rubber torsional springs mounted underneath was developed by U.S. Rubber to solve the problem. The springs are the cylindrical objects mounted below the arrow. As the tractor rides over rough ground, these springs—rather than the rider—twist and turn with each jolt, cushioning the shock for the operator.

Saanich Opposes Leasing Of Foreshore Property

Saanich Council was informed Tuesday night that in spite of its strong protest against such a move, the Department of Lands and Forests has "favorably considered" an application to lease foreshore property on Haro Strait, near Finnerty Cove.

When asked an opinion on the aplication of Edith Marion Paskin et al to lease lot 18, Victoria District, in that area a short time ago, the council vigorouly opposed it.

A letter was read from R. E. Burns, superintendent of lands, telling of the department's action.

"They ask our opinion and then do this to us," said Councillor John G. Ryan.

"We should strongly protest that this will mean public access to the beach will be cut off," said Councillor Leslie Passmore.

Reeve E. C. Warren suggested the council pointed out to the department that it is violating its own act—the Lands Subdivision Act—which provides for public access to navigable waters every 660 feet. Council decided to again voice their opposition and to point out the act violation in the move.

Thinks Slot-Machine Suitably Nicknamed

William C. Moresby, barrister and solicitor, got a smile of agreement from Magistrate H. C. Hall in city police court Wednesday when he observed in a gaming-house case "that term 'one-armed bandit' well characterizes the machine."

He was referring to a slot machine ordered confiscated. Mr. Moresby was in court to save two no-money-paying pinball machines picked up in the raid. Magistrate Hall agreed they could not be classed as gambling devices, ordered them returned.

Station To Check Cattle Rustling Planned At Flood

The provincial agriculture department, in an effort to halt cattle rustling, is planning to establish a new station at Flood, four miles west of Hope, at which inspections under the Stock Brands Act may be carried out.

Formerly inspection was carried out at Yale, but with the opening of the Hope-Princeton Highway a new route from the interior cattle ranges is provided. It is to meet this new threat of cattle rustling over the Hope-Princeton Road that the new station is being established.

According to Thomas Moore, who directs operations under the Stock Brands Act, cattle rustling has been quite active in recent years. He said rustling was especially apparent in the lower Fraser Valley, where farmers have not relied to the same extent as interior ranchers on cattle branding.

Thieves apparently favor the raiding of barns at night and making off with calves which they have transported in cars to Vancouver for sale.

Mr. Moore recalls how earlier this year a rustler in a taxicab had raided a farm near Richmond and had made good his escape with three calves.

Suspicions, however, were aroused when Mr. Moore learned of the rustler's attempt to sell the animals in Vancouver from a taxicab. The animals were traced and recovered before slaughter and the rustler taken to court and convicted.

Pedestrian Suffers Compound Leg Fracture

A compound fracture of the lower right leg was sustained by John Cameron, 45, of 450 Dupplin Road, in an accident in the 2700 block of Douglas Street Tuesday night, city traffic division officers reported. He was taken to Jubilee Hospital.

They said Cameron was walking across Douglas, west to east between Market Street and Hillside Avenue, when he was in collision with a car driven south on Douglas by Manfred D. Nelson, 305 Windermere Place.

Potatoes To B.C.

VANCOUVER (BUP)—Prince Edward Island may find a good potato market this winter in British Columbia.

Earl A. Mackay, manager of the B.C. Coast Vegetable Marketing Board, said in Vancouver Wednesday that B.C.'s potato crop will likely be used up early in February.

Dr. Gallup Crowing, Not Eating Crow

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. George Gallup of the Gallup Poll said Wednesday he was eating pheasant today—a welcome change from his year-long diet of crow.

His poll forecast the U.S. Senate victory of former Governor Herbert H. Lehman in Tuesday's New York state election.

Gallup's figures were not as close as they had been in the past, but he picked the right man.

Gallup gave Lehman 57 per cent of the vote, and his Republican opponent, Senator John Foster Dulles, 43 per cent.

Returns from the actual balloting showed Lehman winning with 52 per cent over Dulles with 48 per cent.

UNESCO! What Is It?

Although 50 countries of the world are represented on the United Nations' Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, a vast number of people in all countries are ignorant as to what the organization is and how it functions, Joseph B. Reid, a member of UNESCO'S secretariat, said in an interview here Wednesday.

Mr. Reid is on holiday from his post in Paris, France.

Many large business firms have written "Messrs. Unes and Company," he said. And one lady "in a North American country not Canada," when introduced at a lavish social affair to a representative of UNESCO, exclaimed enthusiastically, "Oh, I've heard so much of your gallant little country."

Wants Canadian Commission To Assist In UNESCO Work

Canada is the only British Commonwealth country which has not set up a government-sponsored commission to aid in the work being undertaken by the United Nations' Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, Joseph B. Reid, a member of UNESCO' secretariat, told the Canadian Club of Victoria Wednesday.

A graduate of the University of Manitoba and a Rhodes Scholarship winner, Mr. Reid is one of 650 permanent staff members at UNESCO headquarters, Paris, France. He has been spending his holiday here, visiting his father Rev. Andrew D. Reid, 3939 LaSalle Street.

In his address to the Canadian Club, Mr. Reid spoke highly of the work being done by such agencies as the Canadian Council for Reconstruction through UNESCO and the Canadian Book Council, but said a proper commission was needed to organize the dominion to take a proper part in UNESCO's program.

He explained UNESCO was created to bring about a more cultured world. He said it had come to be realized that world peace must be built on intellectual and moral solidarity of the mind.

'IN MINDS OF MEN'

"Wars start in the minds of men," he said. "Something, then, must be done in the minds of men to prevent wars from starting."

UNESCO, he explained, was set up in November, 1945, by a meeting of nations in London. Today, there are 50 member states in the organization.

UNESCO's program of education covers an extensive field from the teaching of basic fundamentals to a high plane of specialized sciences.

"In many parts of the world," Mr. Reid said, "learning to read is of second importance to the people."

He listed Africa, India and China as countries where this was particularly true.

In these countries, he said, it was more important to teach the people how to exist.

He told of UNESCO conducting a "pilot project" in a thickly populated valley in the republic of Haiti, West Indies. Those who were assigned to assist in the project found the inhabitants of the valley living in filth and poverty, and suffering from all kinds of disease.

"What good would it have done to teach those people to read? Our job was to teach them how to remedy their troubles and how to eke out a living from the land."

The UNESCO crew taught the people to drain their swamps, to build septic tanks, and dig proper wells. A medical clinic and dispensary was set up in the valley and experts in agriculture were brought in to advise farmers how to reap best results from the land.

"In less than two years an enormous change had taken place in the valley and the people were ready for reading and writing," Mr. Reid said.

16 Polling Stations To Record Vote In Saanich Elections

Polling stations for the Dec. 10 elections in Saanich have been increased by two to make a total of 16. John B. Tribe, Saanich municipal clerk and returning officer, reported Prospect Lake School and Orange Hall at Saanichton have been added to the list of polling stations.

Nomination period for candidates for the reeveship, council seats, police commission and school boards will be between 12 and 2, Thursday afternoon, Dec. 1. All nominations must be in the hands of the returning officer by the 2 o'clock deadline.

Other Saanich polling stations for this biggest election in the municipality's history are:

Charles Warren Named Master Bee Keeper

Charles Warren was presented Wednesday night with a class A certificate as a master beekeeper by Dr. J. B. Munro, deputy minister of agriculture in B.C.

Mr. Warren was chosen as the most efficient beekeeper on the island by members of the Vancouver Island division of the B.C. Honey Producers' Association. The association met Wednesday at Prince Robert House.

David Scholes was re-elected president of the division; Charles Warren named vice-president and George Wilkinson, secretary-treasurer.

D. H. Heyers was selected to be auditor and G. V. Wilkinson, central executive representative.

Named to the board of directors were W. A. McClure, Charles Warren, D. H. Heyer, Col. H. T. Goodland, W. West, S. H. Owen and George Wilkinson.

Man Carries Scars As He Closes Down Famous Lion Farm

By JACK QUIGG

EL MONTE, Calif. (AP)—"It takes youth and agility to handle lions..." Charles Gay spoke the words quietly, sadly, as he eyed the sign that proclaimed his life's work ended.

The sign outside the internationally-famed Gay's Lion Farm read: "Closed until further notice."

But there will be no further notice. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gay have announced that their showplace, shuttered "for the duration" in 1942, will be put up for sale instead of reopened.

The couple are no longer young. And Gay wears livid scars, souvenirs left by tearing claws on the four occasions he was mauled, to remind him that agility is paramount in handling lions.

They are leaving their farm, but the Gays can look back on a quarter-century of thrills and dangers, the substance of memories to last them their lifetimes.

The two began the extraordinary venture July 1, 1925, when they opened their jungle compound with 57 lions. When they closed the door in 1942, 217 big cats stalked the concrete pens.

In that period hundreds of thousands of visitors toured the 330-by-680 feet wooded farm. Lions' clubs held countless banquets, feasting on broiled and fried lion meat. Several rare white cubs were born. Gay and his wife became two of the most skilful lion trainers in the world.

Gay was training animals in a London circus when he met his wife-to-be, a newspaper woman.

C.C.L. Asks Subsidy For All Non-Paying Transport Services

OTTAWA (CP)—Government subsidization of non-paying transportation services was suggested by the Canadian Congress of Labor before the Royal Commission on Transportation Wednesday.

The congress, representing 360,000 members, declared the community as a whole, rather than railways and other transportation agencies, should be called on to pay the burden of uneconomic operations.

Another recommendation in the C.C.L. brief was that all types of inter-provincial and international transport in Canada should be brought under control of the Board of Transport Commissioners, the government body that now regulates the railways and some other transportation services.

The congress also urged that transportation policy should be aimed at developing new areas and preserving existing communities.

Esquimalt Branch of the Canadian Legion has arranged to have the Esquimalt Remembrance Day Parade to the municipality's memorial park pictured in colored movies to be kept for permanent record, according to Aubrey Jones, secretary.

New Westminster Moves Into Tie For Lead; Seattle Performs Here

Seattle Ironmen are still setting the pace in the northern division of the Pacific Coast Hockey League today but they have company. New Westminster Royals moved into a tie with Coach Dave Downie's squad last night by gaining a 6 to 6 tie with San Francisco while the Ironmen were dropping a surprise 6 to 3 decision to Portland Penguins.

In a third game Los Angeles Monarchs ended their 12-game losing streak as the result of a 2 to 2 deadlock with San Diego Skyhawks.

Tomorrow night Victoria's third-place Cougars return to action after a layoff since last Saturday with a holiday engagement against Seattle at the Memorial Arena starting at 8.30.

Cougars, beaten once this season by the Ironmen at Seattle, will be out to protect their great home record of one defeat in eight games. The locals are also on a six-game win streak at home.

GUNTER RELEASED

General manager Fred Hutchinson of the Cougars announced today that winger Ken Gunter had drawn his release. The Victoria rookie is expected to apply for his amateur reinstatement from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and turn out with one of the local Commercial League squads.

If the heavy advance sale is any indication another sell-out crowd will be on hand to see the Cougars engage Seattle. There are still plenty of tickets available today but are expected to be grabbed up by game time.

Playing without high-scoring Rudy Filion, sidelined with a pulled knee tendon, Seattle led 2 to 0 and 3 to 2 before they tired in the second period, Portland scoring five goals to win going away. Joe Cluman netted four goals for Portland.

New Westminster threw six forwards on the ice in the closing minutes to score a goal and earn a tie with San Francisco, southern division leaders. Behind 6 to 5 coach Babe Pratt of the Royals pulled his goalie and set up the six-man attack. Ollie Dorohoy took a pass from Ken Ullyot to sink the tying counter.

PORTLAND-SEATTLE

First Period — 1, Seattle, Simpson (Stearns, Maxwell), 15.35. Penalty: Kerr.

No penalties.

Third Period—9, Portland, Gruhn, 3.48. Penalties: Schmidt, Simpson, Cluman (2) and 10-minute misconduct.

Announce Changes In Hoop Schedule

A change in Saturday night's Victoria and District Basketball schedule will see the Y.M.C.A. and Tillicums, junior boys' quintets, open the card at 7 with an intermediate A men's fixture between Elks and St. Louis College to follow at 8.

The third game will bring together Chinese Students and Knott and Elford, senior B men, at 9.

Next Wednesday's card has also been revised, loop officials announced. At 7, Eaglettes will tackle Comets in a women's fixture; Brentwood Aces will meet Knott and Elford in a senior B men's match an hour later, while at 9 the two senior A men's entries, Y.M.C.A. and Arrow Furniture, will vie for the points.

Elks intermediate A men's basketball squad will meet Tillicums in an exhibition at Central Junior High tonight at 8.

Felton Gets Draw—Second Controversy

DETROIT (AP)—Young Lester Felton of Detroit, who is fast becoming one of the most controversial figures in boxing, was back in the headlines today—this time because he did not win a fight.

The 20-year-old negro welterweight zoomed into national prominence Oct. 21 when he got an unpopular decision over Kid Gavilan of Cuba in a fight here that touched off investigations by the State Boxing Commission and police.

Felton returned to ring warfare last night and wound up with a 10-round draw at Olympia Stadium with rough Tony Pellone of New York.

Most of the 8,967 fans and the newspapermen thought Felton had won.

Judges Johnny Webber and Lou Jallos each called it a 50-50 fight while Referee Clarence Rosen voted for Felton by a 54-46 margin. Under Michigan rules, explained by boxing commission chairman Floyd Stevens, that was a draw.

The decision had scarcely been announced when a heated discussion broke out among Felton's handlers and boxing commission officials over scoring of the fight.

FELTON DOWN

Chief issue was the card of judge Johnny Webber who awarded Pellone the second round by a 7-3 margin after Felton hit the canvas for a no-count.

Under Michigan rules a fighter who floors his opponent once in a round wins it by a 7-3 margin. If there is no knockdown, the greatest edge he can have is 6-4.

Webber scored it as a knockdown, but referee Clarence Rosen said after the fight that it was not a knockdown.

Felton obviously was trying last night to answer those who figured he didn't deserve the decision over Cuban Gavilan last month.

That decision led to a series of inquiries by the boxing commission and police as a result of rumors that there had been a "fix" on the bout.

STRANGE how a person's memory can play strange tricks when it comes to remembering the size of a crowd at a sports event held some 20 odd years back. After the writer reported that the attendance of 4,781 at Saturday's Coast League game between the Cougars and Vancouver set an all-time record for paid admission to a hockey engagement in Victoria, a number of citizens questioned the statement. In recent days I have heard that the playoff games at the old Willows Arena in 1925 between the original Cougars and Montreal Canadiens drew anywhere from a five to seven thousand people.

ONE fan stormed into the the office and among other things declared I was all wet. "I was one of seven thousand who saw the Cougars beat the Frenchmen," he said. Another was quite definite that a playoff game between the Cougars and Saskatoon drew "well over 5,000." In order to settle the question once and for all I contacted the one man who should know better than anybody how many people attended these games in question—Lester Patrick. After all, he was the operator of the rink.

AFTER a little research Patrick came up with some figures that make my critics look just a bit foolish. In the first place the total seating capacity of the Willows Arena was only 3,500, made up as follows: reserved seats, 2,272; box seats, 228, and rush seats, 1,000, made up of 500 blocks at each end of the rink.

"I had an arrangement with the Oak Bay fire department for the sale of 800 standing room," said Patrick. "So you can see that the total attendance would be 4,300. It is possible we might have gone over that 800 figure at times but at the outside the biggest crowd ever jammed into the Willows was 4,400." Patrick's figures just back up my statement. And after all—I was there in the capacity of a cub reporter.

RUNNING down the rosters of draft eligibles for the annual baseball meeting in Cincinnati on Nov. 17, memories return when you note such names at Buck Newsom, Al Gionfriddo, Johnny Beazley and others. The name Newsom brings to mind the rotund, talkative "Bobo" who played for 25 teams before winding up with Chattanooga last season. Thinking back, this was the Newsom who won 21 and lost five to lead Detroit into the 1940 world series.

GIONFRIDDO had his greatest day in the 1947 world series. The tiny Brooklyn outfielder, racing backward like a frightened deer, hauled down a home run bid by Joe DiMaggio — a catch never to be forgotten by those who watched the game. The next year he was back in the minors. In 1942 a rangy right-hander stepped into a St. Louis Cardinal uniform. Before long the experts were calling the 21-year-old Beazley "one of the greatest in years." Johnny carried the Cards to the world series with a 21 and six record. He also won two of the series games. After that Beazley spent three years in the service. When he returned Johnny had trouble with his arm. He tried to make a go of it with the Boston Braves but failed.

Richard's Return To Scoring Form Bright Spot For Canucks

In the clouds of gloom rolling out from the Montreal Canadiens management, a silver lining must be the way Richard is rocketing again.

The Canadiens top brass has made no bones about a feeling the National Hockey League club is carrying too many (as yet unnamed) "passenger types." But it's certain they aren't putting the finger on the fiery Maurice, who seems powered by a new supply of raw uranium.

The 28-year-old product of Montreal amateur ranks scored both goals last night as Canadiens played a 2 to 2 deadlock with the Rangers at New York. That gives him nine for the season—almost half of the weak-scoring Habitants 11-game total of 21.

The draw with the fifth-place Rangers saved the fast-dropping Canucks from being forced to share their third position. In the only other game, Charlie Conacher's rising Chicago Black Hawks whipped the last-place Bruins 3 to 1 at Boston. The Hawks now are one point behind Canadiens.

ENGAGE LEAFS

The Habitants will get a chance to pull away again in the only game tonight before Saturday starts a six-game week-end card. But their opponents at Montreal are Hap Day's tough Toronto Maple Leafs, two points ahead of Montreal in second place and as many behind the leading Detroit Red Wings.

Last night's two mid-week games drew surprisingly slim crowds. There were only 10,074 in the 13,900-capacity Boston Garden. The 11,417 at New York was Madison Square Garden's smallest of the season and about 4,000 below capacity.

The Rangers-Canadiens deadlock was the eighth tie in the 32 N.H.L. games so far this season, now about one-sixth over.

HAS SCORED 216

Richard's two tallies, both in the first period at New York, brought the Rocket's lifetime N.H.L. total to 216 in his seventh full season. The league's only active 200-goal man, at that rate he could conceivably pass Nels Stewart's all-time record total of 323—a mark that seemed unbeatable when Old Poison retired in 1940 after 15 seasons.

It was as well for Canadiens that Richard twice beat goalie Chuck Rayner in the first period at New York. The Rangers sandwiched a goal by rookie defenceman Gus Kyle between these two and finished the scoring at 5.16 of the third period when Jean-Paul Denis and Alex Kaleta helped Edgar LaPrade beat big Bill Durnan.

CHICAGO-BOSTON

First Period—1, Chicago, Stewart, 6.33; 2, Boston, Maloney, 18.17. Penalties: Toppazzini, R. Conacher, Gadsby, Horeck (2).

Second Period—3, Chicago, R. Conacher (Bentley, Mosdell), 6.47. Penalties: Gadsby (minor and 10-minute misconduct).

NEW YORK-MONTREAL

First Period — 1, Montreal, Richard (Reardon), 5.16; 2, New York, Kyle (LaPrade), 11.04; 3, Montreal, Richard (Reay), 18.59. Penalties: Fisher, Kyle, Harvey.

Second Period—No scoring. Penalties: Harvey, Bouchard.

Roy Heximer Gets Three Counters In Stampeders' Win

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders hold a five-point lead atop the Western Canada Senior Hockey League standings as a result of their convincing 6 to 2 triumph over the cellar-dwelling Regina Capitals here last night.

Seven of the eight goals were scored in the second period, six of the sandwich session markers comng within seven minutes.

Right winger Roy Heximer led the Stampeder attack with a brace of counters and singletons were notched by Doug Cairns, Stan Devico, Johnny Milliard and Butch McDonald.

Lou Hauck and Harvey Stein, former Moose Jaw Canuck, scored for Caps, who went down to their eighth defeat in their last nine starts.

Two players, goalie Russ Dertell of Stamps and Stein, were injured in the scoreless third period. Dertell remained in the game despite a cut which practically closed one eye. Stein was taken out after he collided heavily with Heximer along the boards.

The win kept intact Stampeders' spotless home record this season in which they have garnered four of their seven wins.

Edmonton Flyers and Saskatoon Quakers, tied for second place, meet in Saskatoon tonight as Flyers open a busy 10-day schedule in which they play six games .

BOWLERS' SOCIAL

Annual prize-giving and social of the Victoria West Lawn Bowling Club was held at the club rooms recently. It was announced that the club's annual meeting will be held Nov. 16, commencing at 8. Entertainment was provided by George Guy, William Sloan, William Gray and T. Elworth. Mrs. M. Dixon was accompanist.

Western Gridiron Finals May Draw Record Attendance

Reserve seats for Newata Stadium, which normally seats about 9,000, were sold out early Tuesday, McGillis said, and several thousand rush tickets have been sold since. He would not give an approximate figure on rush tickets sold.

Last year, in a similar Western Interprovincial Football League playoff fixture, 10,000 fans were packed into the stadium. Since then seating accommodation has been added for 4,500 fans.

The game in many ways is a repetition of last year's final. Stampeders last year also met Riders in the W.I.F.U. playoff, the first game in Regina ending in a 4 to 4 tie. In the second contest Stamps won 17 to 6 for their first western union title in 37 years.

The final game this year again will be played in Calgary and on the same Remembrance Day date. Stamps, however, go into the second game of the two-game, total-point series with a six-point lead as a result of their 18 to 12 victory in Regina Saturday.

A key figure in Stamps victory last year was quarterback Keith Spaith and pass receiver Woody Strode. Spaith's passes and the receiving of Strode and newcomer Sugarfoot Anderson again are held the major punch in the Stamps offensive.

Souvenir Stick Sent To The Times

The Times sports department was in receipt of a souvenir hockey stick of the 1949 edition of the Victoria Cougars today. Stick was made by Hudson W. Blake of the B.C. Craft House.

In a letter accompanying the stick, Blake stated he had read in the Times a few weeks ago that one of the original sticks of the 1925 world championship Cougars' hockey team had been brought to the Times office.

By coincidence at the same time he was making sticks to welcome home the new Cougars after an absence of 24 years.

Blake has sent duplicate sticks to Mayor George and members of the Memorial Arena commission.

Football Upset

Alouettes Smother Ottawa Riders

MONTREAL (CP)—The underdog Montreal Alouettes came up with a change of pace yesterday when they crushed Ottawa Roughriders 22 to 7 in the first game of the Big Four Football League's two-game total-point championship series before a chilled crowd of 15,272.

The game, which saw the Riders kick off as 7 to 5 favorites, was the climax of a bitter controversy between the two clubs over the question of night and day football. Alouettes, bent on collecting a rich gate that 20,000 customers were expected to contribute for the game under floodlights, were forced to play in the daylight after Ottawa appealed to the league executive for a decision.

Saturday's Big Four winner will go on to meet the Ontario Rugby Football Union champion, either Hamilton Tigers or Sarnia Imperials.

The winners of this set-to will tangle with the western champions in the Grey Cup final at Varsity Stadium in Toronto Saturday, Nov. 26.

The Als bowed to the league's definite "daylight game decree" but they were reluctant to bow on the battle field although they did ease up enough in the first quarter to spot Riders a 6 to 0 lead.

DEFINITE EDGE

Alouettes chalked up 25 first downs against Ottawa's 17, gained 320 yards over the ground as against Rider's 219, and made 93 through the air against 90.

Montreal attempted 17 forward passes, completing eight and none intercepted while Ottawa tried 16, completed five and had one interception.

Flinging Frankie Filchock was in good form as he tossed touchdown passes to Ralph Toohy and Tommy Manastersky for two of Montreal's touchdowns. Bobby Cunningham scored a major when he recovered a fumble and scampered over the goal line. Glen Douglas accounted for the other major.

TURNER GOES OVER

Ottawa's only touchdown was the result of a Howie Turner effort in the first quarter. His 30-yard heave to Bob Paffrath climaxed a strong Rider's drive. Eric Chipper converted.

Ottawa's other point was scored late in the second quarter by Turner who booted to the deadline.

Incurable Disease Gets Them— Big League Managers Don't Quit

By HERBERT GOREN

NEW YORK—Joe McCarthy is 62 years old; Burt Shotton 65. They possess all the man-made splendors and luxuries one could ask for. They could live out the rest of their years in the comforts of their home environment. But they prefer, instead, to take the abuse that is so emphatically integrated in the job of managing big league baseball teams.

McCarthy, this week, agreed to continue managing the Boston Red Sox for another two years. Shotton has accepted Branch Rickey's bidding with the Brooklyn Dodgers. They are following in the tradition of all baseball managers. Nobody—almost nobody—ever quits. He is fired.

From time to time you have seen stories detailing the resignation of managers. But this is pure euphemism. There was one such story near the of 1946 in connection with Bill McKechnie's parting with the Cincinnati Reds. But it wasn't so.

"Resign?" McKechnie said. "What for? You don't resign good positions. You wait until you're fired."

AN EXCEPTION

The one genuine case of voluntary retirement happened as long ago as the fall of 1916 when Bill Carrigan, after leading the Boston Red Sox to a pennant and world championship, resigned to enter the banking business. Carrigan stayed out until 1927 when Bob Quinn induced him to try another three-year fling with the Red Sox.

Shotton's Dodgers this year won 97 games and the pennant; McCarthy's Red Sox blew the pennant on the last day of the season. Both managers received little if any credit. They were taken over the coals and made responsible only for the losses incurred; never the victories.

On the day their season ended, neither Shotton nor McCarthy felt like managing again. But a month later the old incurable disease afflicted them. All they needed was the slightest encouragement from the front office.

Tom Yawkey had said: "If McCarthy wants the job, he can have it."

McCarthy needed no more than that. He's ready for another year of abuse.

Rickey obviously put the same question to Shotton. When the world series ended, Burt was an embittered old man; and his wife was terribly distraught, almost to the point of a breakdown. But a few weeks back home have softened the series loss.

Shotton is, if nothing else, no quitter. And when managing got in his blood, he couldn't get it out. After he had filled in for Leo Durocher and won a pennant in 1947, Rickey asked him to bow out of the picture for Leo's return, and he did so. But only because Rickey asked him.

There had been suggestions in the papers that Shotton was giving up because he had had enough of managing. How untrue! The following summer he was approached at the all-star game in St. Louis by Frank Shaughnessy, president of the International League. Shaughnessy was speaking for Horace Stoneham and asking Shotton if he were available to manage again. Shaughnessy did not identify the Giants or Stoneham by name as those seeking him. But Shotton didn't ask.

"If it's a big-league team and they want me," he said, "they can have me."

And he would have been managing the Giants today except that Rickey engineered the switch that put Durocher in a New York uniform.

Art Fletcher, for many years a Yankee coach under Miller Huggins and Joe McCarthy, was often approached by other clubs with offers to manage. He turned 'em all down. But earlier Fletcher managed the Phillies. He managed until he was fired.

All this explains Connie Mack's longevity as a manager. If he were only a manager, and not a club owner to boot, he couldn't possibly have survived some of those lean years. Mack will never quit, either. If he ever steps out, it will be only because the board of directors seems to have taken over some of the authority now vested in Connie alone.

Citation Points For Santa Anita Classic

BALTIMORE (AP)—Calumet Farm is splitting its one-two punch between California and Florida this winter, with Citation heading west to Santa Anita and Coaltown southbound for Hialeah.

In announcing plans for the 60-horse string quartered at Pimlico, Trainer Jimmy Jones indicated that Citation will be pointed for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

A victory in this one would enable Citation to overtake Stymie as the greatest money winner of all time. Before coming up with a leg ailment which kept him out of competition this year, Citation has won $865,150—$50,000 less than Stymie.

Jones said the 29 thoroughbreds accompanying the great four-year-old to the coast will include Ponder, winner of the last Kentucky Derby, Fervent, Two Lea and Re-Armed, full brother of the veteran campaigner, Armed.

Coaltown, almost a cinch for horse-of-the-year honors until his two straight defeats by Capot recently, will be named along with Armed for the $50,000-added Widener and $25,000-added McLennan Handicaps at Hialeah.

Duncan Meets Bays In Holiday Soccer

In addition to high school rugby, senior soccer holds the spotlight on the holiday sports menu here. A Victoria and District League match between the classy Duncan Native Sons and Oak Bay is carded at Athletic Park at 2.30.

The Duncan eleven is currently sharing third position with the Navy, two points behind the loop leading Esquimalt and Canadian Legion squads. Oak Bay is in seventh position with three wins against four setbacks.

Two tilts are billed on Saturday. At Athletic Park, Esquimalt will seek to pull out in front of the Vets when they stack up against the Wests, while at Colville Road the Navy club faces the winless Alcos. Both games start at 2.30.

Rounding out the week-end card, the Legiomaires play host to the youthful Heaneys aggregation at Athletic Park on Sunday.

Fletchers Protect Early Lead To Outlast Students

Despite a 20-point performance turned in by sharp-shooting Jimmy John, Chinese Students suffered a loss in last night's senior B cage feature at the Vic High gym. Fletcher's Men's Wear took advantage of an early lead to outlast the Students, 47 to 39.

In other games, the Victoria High School girls soundly trounced Moose, 45 to 9, and K.V.'s Lions defeated K.V.'s Tigers, 30 to 17 in a junior boys' tilt.

Paced by Tom Ferris, the clothiers grabbed a 12 to 4 lead going into the second quarter of the senior B tussle, and increased it to 25 to 13 at the interval. John counted all but three of the Students' first-half points.

After play resumed, Pete Leung took over for losers as they sliced the big lead to five points. John went on a fourth-quarter rampage to pour through for four baskets, but Fletchers made good use of free shots to outscore the Students by a single point.

KENNEDY STARS

Building up a 14 to 0 margin in the opening stanza, the V.H.S. girls had no trouble with Moose. Cash Kennedy spearheaded winners' victory drive with 17 points.

Tonight at the Naden gym, Aces will tackle the Senators in the first of two senior B men's tilts at 7, while an hour later, the Navy quintette plays host to Victoria Confections.

Two Court Decisions In Indian's Watch Theft Case

In city police court today Magistrate H. C. Hall dismissed the charge of theft laid against Thomas A. McNaughton, 713 Front Street, and committed Gordon W. Rice, St. Francis Hotel, for trial in a higher court on the same charge.

They were both charged with theft of a wrist watch from Agnes Sawyer, Indian woman, on night of Oct. 12.

John W. Hansen, 501 Cormorant Street, a surprise defence witness called by Joseph McKenna, counsel for McNaughton, toll the court Tuesday he stole the watch from the Indian woman and sold it to McNaughton for $2 and a mickey of whisky.

McNaughton admitted he knew it was a stolen watch when he got it.

Mrs. Sawyar in her evidence said two white men and a Chinese took the watch from her. She identified McNaughton and Rice as the two white men, saying she saw their faces at the time of the incident. Hansen said he did it alone.

Magistrate said that he had weighed the evidence in the case of McNaughton, who elected speedy trial, and thought he should give him the benefit of the doubt.

He warned, however, "it may well be the Crown will decide to lay a further charge against McNaughon and a charge against Hansen." Hansen gave his evidence under the protection of the Canada Evidence Act.

Arthur P. Dawe, counsel for Rice, said he would accept the evidence heard in the McNaughton case in his client's preliminary hearing.

However, he put Rice in the witness box and accused said he knew nothing of the theft as related by Mrs. Sawyer and that he did not know the watch in question was stolen property.

Mr. Dawe asked for dismissal of the charge against Rice, but Magistrate Hall said he would send him up to a higher court, because of the contradictory evidence in the case, to let a jury decide.

Grateful Residents In Isolated Areas Write To Shantymen

Letters of praise and appreciation from residents of isolated communities along B.C.'s rugged coast were read at the annual meeting of the Vancouver Island branch of the Shantymen's Christian Association held Wednesday night at the Salvation Army Citadel here.

The letters came from individuals and families who rely on the Shantymen to come in their mission boats to provide spiritual guidance and medical care.

Dr. L. David Cowie, minister of University Presbyterian Church, Seattle, attended the meeting with his wife, and delivered the main address of the evening. He spoke of the increasing need of the church in modern living.

"This is an age of power," he said, "and the price of power is prayer. What else have we to match the atomic power in our lives?"

PRAISES MEDICAL MISSION

Dr. Cowie dealt at length with a trip he made to Alaska last July aboard the medical mission ship Willis Shank. He spoke highly of the work done by the men who sail this ship and others like her.

Percy E. Wills, coast missionary, showed colored pictures to those at the meeting, depicting a day's work on a mission ship. Mr. Wills explained visits of the Shantymen's mission ships were looked forward to by lighthouse keepers, wireless men and others in out-of-the-way localities.

Reports on activities of the past year were presented by L. J. Eekman, financial secretary; J. S. Whiting, superintendent; J. A. Coleman, and Jack Spratt.

H. Shannon led singing and E. Wilderspin gave the scripture reading. Mrs. Jean Duckworth rendered a vocal solo and Clifford Ketchum played a selection on a euphonium.

Cmdr. E. R. S. Dickinson, chairman of the branch, was chairman of the meeting.

Film Moving Stars

Details of how movement of the stars is recorded on spectographic film were outlined to members of the Victoria Centre, Royal Astronomical Society of Canada, by M. F. T. Naish, physics instructor at Royal Roads, at a meeting Wednesday night.

The picture record of stars in motion is of invaluable aid to astronomers, he said. From the film, such things as a star's temperature, rotational velocity and even its chemical composition may be determined.

P.O. Minnis, who won his wings in 1942, was pilot of a four-engined bomber. He was reported missing on April 27, 1943, and later presumed dead. Award of the D.F.C. was made posthumously.

P.O. Minnis was born and educated in Victoria.

Lawyer Guilty Of Breach Of Trust, Awaiting Sentence

J. Percival Walls, found guilty of breach of trust, was remanded until later for sentence by Mr. Justice James M. Coady in Assize Court Wednesday.

The 65-year-old former lawyer was found guilty by a jury of fraudulently converting to his own use a sum of $3,131 belonging to his client, Mrs. Isabella E. Corble, a widow.

The grey-haired former member of the legal profession, who practiced law in Victoria for 35 years, took the verdict calmly. The jury was out 25 minutes before returning with a verdict of guilty.

Present in court to hear the verdict was Mrs. Corble, a partially blind widow, who testified at the trial that Walls had deprived her of the proceeds of two life insurance cheques. She trusted him, she said, and had placed in his hands her entire estate, willed to her by her husband.

Walls in his defence contended that he was given authority by the widow to invest the proceeds of the two insurance policy cheques. He said it was not his fault if the investment turned out to be a bad one.

He testified he gave the cheques to Clyde Gillies, a business associate, on the understanding that the money would be returned to him in six months at 10 per cent interest. Gillies never returned the money, he said.

James Proudfoot, counsel for the defence, suggested that his client had been negligent in looking after the affairs of his client. He claimed Walls had acted in good faith and what he believed to be in the best interest of Mrs. Corble.

A fine of $35 was imposed against Charles Walter Williams, 2638 Shelbourne Street, today in city police court. He pleaded guilty to driving a car Nov. 5 while his license was under suspension.

Mayor Prepared To Fight To Finish For Administrator If Election Issue

Faced with his first mayoralty contest since his defeat of Andrew McGavin in the December, 1944, elections, Mayor Percy George today said he was prepared to fight to the finish in favor of appointment of a director of administration for the city should the question of administrator versus city manager become an election issue.

Questioned this morning if he thought the matter might become an issue, Mayor George said "I do not see any need to make an issue over the question because the City Council has gone on record as having endorsed a by-law covering a director of administration."

Ald. M. A. Kent, who has accepted the support of the Civic Non-Partisan League in his bid for the office of mayor, has spoken repeatedly in favor of calling the proposed new official a city manager. There also has been some question of the authority which would be held by a city administrator under the Municipalities Act.

'ALL THE POWERS'

Mayor George said today that, as far as he was concerned, the proposed by-law, which will go before the ratepayers in the Dec. 8 elections, would give the official all the powers that he would have as a city manager.

"But," the mayor added, "if it becomes an issue, I'm out to fight to the finish in favor of calling him a director of administration."

The name "city manager" has a certain stigma so far as the mayor is concerned, and he believes appointment of an official under that name would mean a blot on the escutcheon of Victoria in the minds of municipal officials across Canada and the U.S.

The mayor believes "city manager" implies to most people such things as politicial bosses and inefficient and inept administration.

He said that, according to the booklet "The Story of the Council-Manager Plan," published by the National Municipalities League in New York, the scheme had been evolved in 1912 to do away with bosses and political machines with the hope of bringing abler men into office and to afford letting of honest contracts and businesslike government.

He quoted the booklet as saying "The plan tends to eliminate the spoils system. To protect his own record and to advance in his own profession the manager must hire on merit instead of because an applicant is sent around by Fred or Mike."

The mayor feels that because of these matters outlined in the U.S. council-manager plan, appointment of a city manager in Victoria would be an indication to others that Victoria had to make the appointment because these conditions existed.

BEST FOR CITY

However, the mayor repeated he saw no need for making the question of administrator versus manager an issue. "I see no need for that to be made an issue and befuddle the people's minds; and I say now, without fear of contradiction in any way, that a director of administration, as recommended by Stevenson and Kellogg, is the best thing for the city of Victoria."

The mayor also was outspoken in his opinion of the Non-Partisan League's announcement of its support of Ald. Kent in the contest for mayor.

"I would welcome Ald. Aubrey Kent running because I reiterate what I've felt all this year that a mayoralty campaign is a very healthy sign for any city, but I think the alderman has been placed in a very invidious position by the way in which the support of the Non-Partisan League has been procured for him."

League membership has been estimated at 1,500, including nearly 300 businessmen, but the mayor said he had been informed the league had selected Ald. Kent as its candidate at a private meeting attended by only 28 members.

'CLOSED SHOP'

"I am very much surprised that the Non-Partisan League, who have set themselves up with the idea of directing the vote of 18,000 people, should adopt a closed shop and secret session method," he said.

The mayor added he had done all he could to have the city's council sessions and other meeting made public, particularly to the press, "and yet, as I am given to understand, reporters were denied the right to attend the Non-Partisan League meeting.

"Surely," he said, "in this day and age of a fight between a democratic way of living and totalitarianism, action of this type is unwarranted and untimely."

The mayor charged the league had done a disservice to the city, "not because they selected candidates to run, but because about 28 members of the organization should see fit to endorse one aspirant for the mayoralty office and present that candidate to the people with the recommendation that he should be their choice also."

G. I. Edgelow, public relations official for the league, said the league meeting to which Mayor George Referred, was attended by the executive of the league and from 30 to 40 businessmen, not necessarily league members.

Women Charged With Having Stolen Goods

Summary trial was elected but plea was reserved by Elizabeth B. Sullivan, 587 Johnson Street, when she appeared in city police court today and had a charge read against her alleging illegal possession of stolen goods.

She was remanded to Wednesday for trial. Joseph McKenna appeared as counsel.

She is alleged to have had in her possession on Nov. 8 a quantity of linen and silverware of over the total value of $25, the property of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, well knowing the same to have been theretofore stolen.

She was arrested by Detectives Louis Callan and Angus Munro and police woman Alice Pye by virtue of a warrant and was released after putting up bail.

Island Briefs Go Before Compensation Inquiry Next Week

J. W. Heffernan, counsel for the commission inquiring into the B.C. Compensation Act, said today nine submissions from Vancouver Island, including four from Victoria would be ready for presentation to the inquiry by next week, along with 16 briefs from Vancouver.

Examination of George Home, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, by Senator Farris, scheduled for today, was not held.

Senator Farris stated that on reading the transcript of previous evidence, he found that Alfred Bull, K.C., his associate, and C. K. Guild, K.C., counsel for the Workmen's Compensation Board, had fully covered the brief of Mr. Home.

"It would be wasting time to go over the ground again," he said.

Seven Days In Jail For City Motorist

A seven-day jail term and a six-month license suspension was imposed against motorist Ralph L. Savage, Chapman Street, today in city police court. He was found guilty by Magistrate H. C. Hall on a charge of being intoxicated while in control of a car on Hallowe'en night on Scott Street.

Joseph McKenna was defence counsel and cross-examined each prosecution witness at length.

Constable Aldon Appleton and Sgt. Roy Woolsey told of seeing a car driving on the wrong side of Scott Street in the 2700 block Oct. 31. Both testified Savage, the driver, was intoxicated. Dr. E. L. McNiven, after examining accused at the police station, said he was of the opinion Savage was intoxicated and not fit to drive a car.

In the witness box, Savage said he had only had two drinks of rum before supper and a half bottle of beer later in the evening.

Many Veterans Still Without Civic Certificates Of Thanks

Concern over the fact that many ex-servicemen in this area have not yet received the Greater Victoria certificates of thanks for their service during the Second World War, was expressed today by Mayor Percy George, himself a veteran of the First World War.

Asked to comment on reports that hundreds and perhaps thousands of the veterans had not yet received their certificates, the mayor said "I am not surprised to hear this report because many veterans have approached me during this year, including my own four sons, advising me they had not yet received their certificates.

"It is very annoying to one in my position, with so much civic work to do, to have to spend a great deal of time receiving representations of young veterans regarding this matter.

"I feel very keenly that these veterans should have to do this because I spent many days, along with the reeves of the adjoining municipalities, in signing nearly 13,000 of these certificates with the understanding that each and every veteran who was registered in this district was included in the list to receive one of these 'thank you' certificates.

"Where they are held up I do not know for sure, but I believe the Citizens' Rehabilitation Council were responsible for their distribution."

The certificates were signed during 1946.

To Open Section Of H.B.C. Addition To House Toyland

A part of the main floor in the new addition to the Hudson's Bay Company store here will house this year's Christmas Toyland, C. N. Chubb, store manager, announced today.

The toy section will be opened to the public Saturday.

Work in the rest of the new addition will continue. Other sections will be opened as work progresses. Contractors have been working crews in shifts, day and night, in order to get the building ready for use as soon as possible.

The company installing escalators will put on a double crew starting Monday. It is reported the moving staircases might be operating before Christmas.

Formal opening of the entire new section will not take place until late next spring or early summer.

Make Room For More Machinery At Arena

To provide sufficient room in the event that a second refrigeration compressor is installed at the Victoria Memorial Arena, the small compressor now there is to be moved approximately eight feet.

The operation will be supervised by Charles T. Hamilton, consulting engineer, who said the Canadian Ice Machine Co. is making the move before the refrigeration contractor hands over the equipment to the commission.

There are at present two compressors at the arena, a large one and a small one. If a curling rink is built nearby, relying on refrigeration from the arena, another machine would be installed.

Co-ordinating Group For Teen Clubs Planned

Plans for setting up a Teen Centre co-ordinating committee in Victoria were discussed at a meeting here presided over by Jack A. Hutchings, B.C. Teen Town director, and leaders of the Victoria Midtown Teen Club and Royal Oak Teen Club.

The idea as outlined by Mr. Hutchings calls for the establishment of such a committee to comprise representation from all Victoria teen centres such as the Eagle's Teen Club and James Bay Teen Town.

The B.C. director also outlined requirements for Teen Town affiliation; observance of the four basic rules; no military, political or religious affiliations and democratic elections.

Oak Bay To Enter Water District If Ratepayers Approve

Providing Oak Bay ratepayers approve at the Dec. 10 municipal elections, that municipality will likely be a member of the Greater Victoria Water District by the end of the year.

Wednesday, Oak Bay Council approved an agreement with the District Water Board under which the municipality will join with the city, Esquimalt and Saanich in the scheme for joint administration of water distribution in the area.

Oak Bay earlier refused to enter into the agreement until certain adjustments were made, though ratepayers had signified their desire to participate in 1947.

CAN BE REVIEWED

The agreement approved Wednesday stipulates that representation on the water board can be reviewed in September, 1953.

If and when Oak Bay comes under the plan, the city's representation will be increased from three to four members. The three municipalities each will have one representative.

Under the agreement, the water district must lay a water main of not less than 30 inches in diameter from Smith's Hill Reservoir to the corner of Lansdowne and Foul Bay Roads "with all practicable expedition."

In addition, at the request of Oak Bay, the board has agreed to seek amendments to the Water District Act which will safeguard any section of the municipal water supply system from summary expropriation by the water district.

REEVE SATISFIED

Reeve R. A. Wootton said he was satisfied with the arrangements and was pleased that an agreement had been reached in time for ratepayers to ratify it at the December elections.

Water board commissioner Ralph Davis pointed out that entry of Oak Bay into the scheme was a big step forward, since primary ain. of the board was to get a water supply system for the entire Greater Victoria area.

Oak Bay residents may have lower water rates as a result of the agreement. The municipality now pays the city 9.1 cents per 1,000 gallons. City pays the water board 7.5 cents per 1,000 gallons.

Seeks Re-election On Saanich Police Board

Saanich police commissioner G. Stanley Eden, 3115 Wascana Street, reported today he will seek re-election on the Saanich police commission at the Dec. 10 elections. He will be seeking election for his twelfth consecutive year on the board. Commissioner George Askey still has a year to go as a member of the board. Chairman is Reeve E. C. Warren.

The Provincial Museum will be closed on Remembrance Day (tomorrow).

Australian Government Wants More Favorable High Court

By ANTHONY WHITLOCK

SYDNEY, N.S.W. (CP)—Australia's High Court is under fire by Labor government members following its decision that the government's "free medicine" act is partly invalid.

Labor members say that if they get back into power at the December elections they will have to pack the High Court so that Labor legislation "will be treated on its merits."

One proposal they are discussing among themselves is that four or six new judges be added to the present seven. To justify their proposal they claim that there is more work for the court than can be done by the present judges, some of whom, they say, are virtually incapacitated by age.

SOME SETBACKS

Previous big setbacks to Labor legislation by the High Court include the decision that the government's act to nationalize banks was unconstitutional; the verdict that the government's wartime rationing of gasoline was now illegal, and the refusal of the court to allow the government to monopolize air transport within the dominion.

The High Court was established at confederation in 1901, when three judges were appointed. Appointments are for life and no judge may be removed from office unless the governor-general-in-council, or an address from both houses of parliament, decides he has misbehaved or is incapable.

PUBLIC ATTACKS

No judge has ever been considered incapable, but several of the present ones have been attacked publicly by leading government members, especially the left-wing minister for transport and external territories, Edward J. Ward, and the speaker, Solomon Rosevear. They claim that the High Court has not moved with the times and is undemocratic in outlook.

Among the judges they attack are Sir George Rich, now 86, who was appointed in 1913, and Sir Hayden Starke, aged 78, appointed in 1920. The present chief justice, Sir John Latham, now 72, was appointed in 1935.

Although the High Court is the final arbiter in Australia on constitutional matters, there still remains the final resort to the Privy Council in London. Labor party policy is to abolish the right of this appeal to London but the government here has done nothing about it. In fact, when the High Court found that the Bank Nationalization Act was invalid the government promptly appealed to the Privy Council. The Privy Council confirmed the High Court finding.

LESSON IN SAFETY—A more powerful plea for traffic safety could hardly be found than this tragic tableau caught by a photographer in New Hyde Park, N.Y. While the youngster's bicycle rests against the bumper of the car which struck him down, first aid is given to Bobbie Schuman, age 10. The boy suffered a broken leg and serious internal injuries.

New Rent Increases Based On Figures Before 1948 Boost

OTTAWA (CP)—The base rate used for figuring new rents will be the rents in effect just before previous increases were permitted in 1948, a government spokesman said here Wednesday.

Increases of 10 per cent on unheated houses and 15 per cent on heated dwellings were permitted in November, 1948. Last Thursday additional increases of 20 and 25 per cent were granted, effective Dec. 15.

Under the method of calculation adopted the amount added to the present rate for heated houses will be 25 per cent of the pre-1948 rate (not 25 per cent of 115 per cent). Thus the total of the 1948 and 1949 increases will be a flat 40 per cent of the pre-1948 rate.

Similarly, the amount added to the present rental of unheated dwellings will be 20 per cent of the pre-1948 rate, making the total of the 1948 and 1949 increases a flat 30 per cent of the pre-1948 rate.

Increases granted landlords in specific cases for renovations, tax jumps and other local adjustments during the entire period of rental controls will be considered as part of the pre-1948 rate.

Regulations bringing the new increases into force likely will be made public tomorrow by Canada's rental administrator.

So in Libby's Tomato Juice you really do enjoy finer flavour. And you get your full share of vitamins A and C of which Libby's is an excellent dietary source. Without these vitamins your body has less resistance to winter colds and infections. It's a wise health rule to serve Libby's often—to keep a few tins in the refrigerator and enjoy it whenever you're thirsty.

Majority Award Urges 3-Cent Boost For Cannery Workers

A 3-cent-an-hour boost in wages for employees of Canadian Canners (Western) Ltd. Vancouver and Lulu Island plants was recommended today in a majority award of a conciliation board.

The award was signed by G. E. Street, chairman, and H. Gargrave, labor nominee on the board. The workers were represented by the United Packinghouse Workers of America, Local 350.

L. R. Stephens, company nominee on the board, said he felt the company had proven its case for a decrease in wages "but in view of the pattern set in the fresh fruit and vegetable packing industry, and in the canning industry in central British Columbia, I am forced to recommend against any decrease or increase in the 1948-49 wage scale."

Social Work Secretary Will Visit Victoria

Miss Phyllis Burns who has been appointed a permanent secretary of the Canadian Conference on Social Work, will visit Victoria Nov. 18.

Miss Burns will retain her position as secretary of the Child Welafre Division of the Canadian Welfare Council but will give an increasing amount of time to conference business as time for its next meeting—the week of June 11, 1950, in Vancouver—draws near.

The growing size of the conference has made it necessary to appoint a full-time secretary.

Kicked In Face, Witness Testifies In 'Assize Court

Testifying in Assize Court this morning, L. J. Dickson, a witness, said he had been kicked in the face by John Graham when he tried to prevent him from taking a car carrying a U.S. license from Dickson Bros. service garage here.

Graham, a youth, is facing trial before Mr. Justice James A. Coady of stealing last May a 1939 Buick sedan belonging to Harold W. Jacobs of San Francisco.

Dickson said the youth came to the garage and posed as the car owner's son. He said Graham asked for the Buick to go to a party at the Uplands.

Graham tried to drive out of the garage, the witness testified. He stopped him, however, but not without first receiving a few kicks in the face during a scuffle with the accused. He said Graham finally ran out of the garage, leaving his hat behind.

Under cross-examination by P. J. Sinnott, counsel for the accused, Mr. Dickson said he did not give the automobile to Graham because he did not believe he was the car owner's son.

M. C. Agrey, doorman at the Empress Hotel, testified he had the car stored at the garage for Mr. Jacobs.

Other witnesses included, Clarence Andre Paton, 81 Millstream Road, Langford, and R. E. Brown, 3820 Douglas Street.

The case is continuing. R. D. Harvey is counsel for the crown.

City Police Look For 'Thin Man' Thief

A man who can crawl through narrow places—referred by police as the "thin man" thief—struck again in the city Wednesday night. Entry was spotted by Constable Richard Ward while checking premises at 1.10 this morning.

Victoria Man Seeks Disability Aid In Inquiry Brief

Request for a partial permanent disability rating from the Workmen's Compensation Board was made by Jim Day of Victoria at the commission of inquiry into the B.C. Compensation Act, which adjourned at the courthouse today until Wednesday.

Mr. Day, 68, told Chief Justice Gordon McG. Sloan, commissioner, that he had been hurt in an accident at the J. H. Todd & Sons Empire Cannery at Esquimalt on Aug. 19, 1947.

TWO OPERATIONS

He said that his compensation payments ceased Feb. 28 of this year and that on two occasions he was released and told to go and get work, and following each turn at work had to undergo an operation.

"I have had two operations ordered by the board," he said. "If I was fit, why these operations."

His work at the cannery consisted of handling heavy shipments of salmon, with which he coupled the post of first aid attendant. He said that now he cannot get light work anywhere and all jobs asking for first aid attendant require warehouse work or bookkeeping to be done also.

"My one desire is to get light work," Mr. Day said. "I would like some consideration until I can get work. I don't want charity. My complaint is that before the accident I was healthy and able to work hard. I tried to get jobs of every description and couldn't get them since then."

In answer to a query from George Home, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, Mr. Day said the Compensation Board had stated it was up to him, not the board, to find the light work.

"The only answer must be that the board thinks you haven't any disability now," said Chief Justice Sloan at one point.

Mr. Day said two fingers of his right hand had lost their grip and gave pain when used and the muscles of his arms were atrophied owing to lack of the original heavy work, he did.

No vocational training had been suggested for him by the Workmen's Compensation Board, he said.

He said he had had three operations in all and hospital treatment since the accident and received good medical treatment through the board.

Health Official Receives Award

E. S. Gropp, chief sanitary inspector of the Victoria-Esquimalt health department, is one of seven British Columbians who have been awarded aid under the federal health program to enable them to take special training in various aspects of public health.

Mr. Gropp now is taking a four-month non-degree course at the University of California, Los Angeles.

BUOY NOT BURNING

Mariners were today advised by the Department of Transport here that Zero Buoy, Fraser River, is reported not burning.

The department also said Hornby Island wharf black spar buoy is reported out of position.

CHELOHSIN BADLY PUNCTURED—Her 1,134-ton hull badly punctured by rocks, the Union Steamship's coastal ship Chelohsin is shown hard aground on a sandbar off Siwash Rock at Stanley Park, Vancouver. The ship ran onto the bar in a dense fog late Sunday. The owners have called for salvage bids to get the stranded ship free as soon as possible, lest a westerly gale pound the battered vessel beyond repair.

Former Empress Of Japan To Start Trans-Atlantic Run

MONTREAL—The Empress of Scotland, formerly the Empress of Japan, prewar flagship of the Canadian Pacific Steamships' Pacific fleet, will enter the company's trans-Atlantic service next May after completion of a two-year reconversion program in a Scottish shipyard, it was announced here today by H. Beaumont, steamship passenger traffic manager.

Famed for her still unequalled trans-Pacific speed record and for her world-wide service as one of Britain's hardest-working troopships, the 26,000-ton luxury liner will be the largest and fastest vessel in the St. Lawrence service.

She will ply between Liverpool, Greenock and Quebec City, sailing from Quebec every third Friday and from Liverpool every third Tuesday. Special boat trains will carry passengers from Montreal to Quebec on the sailing days.

Completely refitted for peacetime travel, the Empress of Scotland will have her passenger capacity reduced from a prewar total of 1,115 to 663 in order to provide more spacious and luxurious accommodation. She will carry 458 first-class passengers and 205 tourist class, all in outside cabins, and suite accommodation will be available in combination of bedrooms and sitting rooms.

Financial Review

Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario will start construction of a $150,000,000 60-cycle hydro plant adjacent to the Queenston power house as soon as a treaty for water diversion has been arranged between Canada and the U.S.

The markets today:

Wall Street—Price lines were thoroughly tangled in the stock market. General tendency seemed to be downward but most price changes were fractional. Golds were hard hit.

London — British government stocks were again the targets for sellers. A small rally around mid-day was short-lived and erased later. Losses were up to ½ per cent. Industrials followed the pattern of gilt-edged issues.

Montreal — Stocks were in lower ground near the final hour. Changes ranged from fractions to more than a point. Many stocks were unchanged.

Toronto—Golds were sent skidding downwards by the heaviest selling in some time. Base metals were under pressure and western oils sagged. Industrials showed scattered fractional declines.

B.C. Herring Catches Ahead Of Last Year

British Columbia herring fishermen are hauling the small silvery fish out the waters off the east coast of Vancouver Island more quickly to date than during the past five years.

The chief supervisor of fisheries today reported the catch up to and including last Saturday at 49,126 tons, a few thousand tons ahead of last year and the year before. Last year one of the biggest herring catches in history was taken in British Columbia waters.

Herring fishing in B.C. waters now has been under way for about three weeks this season.

Bulk of the catch to date has gone to reduction plants which convert the small fish into oil and meal. So far 7,397 tons of meal and 1,097,035 gallons of oil have been produced.

While a considerable quantity of B.C. herring was canned during the war years, only 28,410 cases had been put up to last Saturday. The remainder of the catch has been used for bait, dry salted, frozen or used fresh.

REFUGE

By Mildred Cram and Harwood White

Copyright 1949, by NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: A wealthy widow, Mrs. Everson, believes that an atomic war is impending and with it will come the destruction of civilization. She has sold all her belongings and put her money into jewels. She has equipped two giant trailers with comforts and is fleeing with her servants to "a place of safety." In the party is Mrs. Margaret Malone, her cook, who did not understand the expedition until she was a part of it and who has since been tempted to run away. Mrs. Malone has learned that Mrs. Everson is in love with her handsome chauffeur, Rudy, a disgraced movie star, but Rudy likes Mrs. Everson only for her money. Victor, the Filipino houseboy, and the Marchese Dellacasa, an exiled nobleman, are the others in the party. Mrs. Everson's fear of the impending "great explosion" is heightened by her frantic appears to Rudy to "hurry." "She's sure scared of that bomb," Victor tells Mrs. Malone. Mrs. Malone answers: "Who isn't?"

* * *

CHAPTER 16

MRS. MALONE peered out of the window again and then turned to Rudy.

"Where are we?" she asked.

"The arrow points toward Colorado or Montana," Rudy said. "We're going the hard way, but don't ask me why. Maybe she's still throwing pursuers off the scent."

He stretched again.

"Me for the hay!"

"I, too," Victor said.

"But Mrs. Everson . . ."

"Let her sleep," Rudy interrupted. "She's out like a light."

"How about the Bomb?" Mrs. Malone said sarcastically. "If we don't hurry along, maybe we'll be too late!"

Rudy's smile flickered.

"You can only die once," he said. "As for me, I'm against driving over a cliff in my sleep. Come on, Victor."

SILENCE WAS PROFOUND

The minutes passed in a silence so absolute that Mrs. Malone found herself pausing to listen, straining to hear, holding her breath with a sort of dread. It was a silence composed of the loneliness of deserted rocks and empty skies. Here, on this high, still place, man the builder and man the destroyer seemed no longer to exist. The fever and the fury of great cities were far away, dwarfed into inconsequence, left behind.

The steps were down; Mrs. Malone went outside and forward along the trailer's shining flank to the truck. Mrs. Everson was asleep, her head on her arms, her face hidden. Mrs. Malone hesitated, then crossed the road and stood on the brink, looking off at the great platter of earth.

"I wish Joe were here," she thought.

All through those long years with him there had been the peace and security of love, his strength and wisdom, a way of striking through the mazes of doubt to the heart of a situation, or to the truth of a human being. She had relied on him too long.

In a few brief days the protecting wall he had built around her had crumbled and fallen, had vanished forever. Joe was gone. Yet with her eyes closed, now, she could see his kind, quizzical face, could hear his voice, dry and gentle, could feel his arms around her.

She tore her mind away, knowing that it was hopeless and wrong to remember. She must live, now, with emptiness and loneliness. But what would Joe have decided about these people? Could she believe the foreigner? Could she believe Victor? Or the implacable Rudy, tensed for some sudden, fierce spring? Or Mrs. Everson?

And then, suddenly, she knew what Joe would have done: he would have got out of there—fast! Nothing in the world could have persuaded him to string along with such a gang.

She turned, with some half-formed idea of escape. She could be halfway down the other side of the grade before any of them awakened. She might get a lift—this road was used—surely a car would overtake her.

"Malone!"

Mrs. Everson was sitting up. Now she opened the cab door and swung herself down.

"Where's Rudy?"

"He and Victor are asleep, Madam."

ONE DAY TO SAFETY

Mrs. Everson's face gave evidence of the long night's vigil. Her eyes were darkly shadowed; the carefully painted lips were blurred.

She crossed the road and stood beside Mrs. Malone. Two steps beyond, the mountain fell away into space. They could see the grade twisting down between the canyon walls, coil after coil, to the valley floor.

"Let them sleep," Mrs. Everson said in her sombre voice. "The rest is easy. We can make time today. And day after tomorrow we'll be there. Safe."

She was not speaking to Mrs. Malone, but to herself. Her expression, as she looked off at the panorama of uninhabited land, was again triumphant. She made Mrs. Malone think of some ruler or prehistoric priestess.

The gulf of space beneath her only deepened the impression. Mile beyond mile the emptiness stretched away, transfixed in silence. Over it all the strange, pallid woman seemed to hold dominion. As if, somehow, she knew the secret of its destiny . . .

Suddenly she said: "You were meaning to run away just now, weren't you? Are you afraid of me?"

"No," Mrs. Malone answered. "You hate me."

Pilot Reported Trouble In Plane Before Takeoff

WASHINGTON (AP)—Erick Rios Bridoux, Bolivian pilot of the P-38 which crashed into an Eastern Air Lines plane killing 55 persons, told investigators he had reported trouble before he started his landing descent.

In a deposition entered today in the record of a Civil Aeronautics Board hearing, Rios said the Washington National Airport control tower "answered me 'O.K.'"

He said he had reported trouble but advised the tower he did not think it was an emergency.

Rios said he heard the tower's instructions to land in second place on runway three because airplanes were waiting to land.

He told the tower, Rios said, "I am going to land on runway number three. I am having a little trouble with the right engine."

"They answered me—called me by Bolivian number.

"I didn't see anything. I couldn't get any power. I could not get any more—."

Earlier the investigators heard testimony that Rios acknowledged instructions as he headed toward the landing approach in which his fighter and the airliner collided.

Rios is in hospital being treated for severe injuries suffered in the crash.

Husband Appeals For Youths Who Murdered His Wife

SEOUL (AP)—Dr. Horace H. Underwood, American missionary and educator, today asked clemency for four young Koreans condemned to death for slaying his wife. The kindly missionary appealed by letter to President Syngman Rhee.

Dr. Underwood said the slayers deserved punishment "for crimes against this country and against civilized law and order." But he expressed belief the 60-year-old Mrs. Underwood would not want her slayers executed.

Mrs. Underwood was shot by two hooded gunmen at her home last March 17. At the time she was giving a tea for the wives of faculty members of Chosen Christian College, which she and her husband founded.

Last month nine members of a leftist group were tried for her murder. It was testified the gunmen intended to kill Miss Mo Yoon Sook, Korean poetress and anti-Communist author. Miss Sook was a guest at the tea party.

Five other members of the group were sentenced to prison.

Delete 'Dominion' From Phone Books

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Abbott said today in the Commons that his Deputy Minister gave the order to have "Government of Canada" replace "Dominion of Canada" wherever it appeared in telephone directories. This was because "Dominion" did not form a part of the name of this country as was made clear by section three of the British North American Act.

He was replying to a written question of C. W. Hodgson (P.C.—Victoria, Ont.).

Pension Plan Offered U.S. Steel Employees

PITTSBURGH (UP) — United States Steel Corp. offered the C.I.O. United Steelworkers a pension plan today that may write the end to the great 41-day steel strike.

Attorneys for the union and the corporation held a joint study of the proposed settlement paper as negotiating committees stood by. Details of the offer were kept secret.

A "Big Steel" agreement would virtually clean up the strike. Already the union has signed up five big companies of the "Little Steel" group and more than 40 smaller companies. Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. and Great Lakes Steel Co. came to terms Wednesday.

As C.I.O. president Philip Murray awaited the call to a U.S. Steel meeting, his lieutenants were in conference with at least two medium-sized basic companies.

Wheeling Steel, which employs 20,000 in five plants in the Ohio valley, met with U.S.W. officials until 1.30 a.m. After an eight-hour rest they went back into conference again. The company said ie has submitted an "agreement" to the union.

Says Reds Use Atom For Economic Needs

LAKE SUCCESS (CP) — Foreign Minister Vishinsky of Russia told the United Nations today that "we in the Soviet Union are utilizing atomic energy—but not to stockpile atomic bombs."

Red-faced and emphatic, Vishinsky shouted:

"If we wanted to, we could stock-pile as many atomic bombs as we would need.

"We in the Soviet Union are utilizing atomic energy for our own economic needs.

"We are razing mountains, we are irrigating deserts. We are cutting through jungles."

Vishinsky contended Russia is using atomic energy to overcome difficulties put in her path by nature.

Report Victim Drowned

VANCOUVER (CP)—Was prim, 45-year-old Ferne Blanche Fisher leading a "double life."

Body of the attractive store clerk was found floating in False Creek here Wednesday and police suspect foul play.

They are investigating the possibility of a double life as they began hunting beneath the surface drabness in her life.

An autopsy showed she died of drowning—there was water in the lungs. She was alive when she entered the water but possibly unconscious, police said. There were small, internal bruises on the left side of her throat which "could have been caused by fingers." She may have been the victim of a sex maniac.

LONGED FOR GLITTER

Friends described her as a woman "who longed for a little glitter."

A spinster, the glitter she lacked in real life was found in the movies.

She attended them faithfully and was last seen in front of a theatre early Tuesday night.

"Blanche lived a movie life in her own mind some of the time," an acquaintance said. "She attended shows faithfully."

The autopsy report, released today by Chief Walter Mulligan, showed she had intercourse the night of her death.

"Foul play is a distinct possibility," said Chief Mulligan.

Whether she was criminally attacked is still being investigated, he added.

"I don't want to be an alarmist," he said, "but I personally feel that this may have been the work of a sex maniac.

SUICIDE UNLIKELY

"Circumstances surrounding the case certainly do not suggest suicide."

When found the body was clad only in a coat and dress. Body hair had been shaved but hair on the head remained intact.

Shaving of the body hair led police to believe that Miss Fisher may have undergone surgery, but the autopsy showed no operation had been performed, she was a Christian Scientist.

Her death was similar to that of 25-year-old Joyce Monasterski, whose nude body was found on a suburban beach Oct. 8 after she had been missing 22 days.

Police said the Monasterski case was murder. She died of asphyxiation.

Husband Whose Wife Planned His Murder Receives Proposal

BREMERTON (AP)—A 34-year-old husband, whose wife is charged with attempting his murder to put an end to what she called his persistent love-making, today dusted off an offside proposal of marriage.

The husband, Wilford Piatt, showed reporters a letter which he received from a New York City woman.

"Wilford," it read in part, "I would never get tired of your love-making."

Piatt has said he wanted his wife back despite her signed statement that she made a $324 down payment on an unfulfilled plot to have him killed.

"I'm not interested in any proposals unless the woman has enough money to help me get my wife out of jail," he said.

The letter had been misdirected to Mrs. Margaret Piatt, held on a $3,500 bond. It was opened by sheriff's deputies as routine—and forwarded to Piatt.

The writer described herself as "38 years old, a grass widow for 14 years, with a pretty figure."

Mrs. Piatt will be arraigned next Monday.

Pope Asks Christian World To Pray For Peace In Palestine

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (UP)—Pope Pius, as part of his appeal for the internationalization of Jerusalem, urged all Catholics today to join in a "Crusade of Prayer' for the return of peace to the Holy Land.

The Pope issued his exhortation from his summer residence.

Noting the future of Palestine was being discussed by the United Nations, he said the Holy Land held "a post of privilege in the thought and affection of every Christian."

Twice previously he had appealed for peace in Palestine and the internationalization of Jerusalem. His first encyclical on the subject was issued Oct. 24, 1948, and the second on April 15, 1949.

In his new pronnouncement the Pontiff appealed for a settlement that would insure Jerusalem and its holy places against the "daver of war and of ruins."

He asked that "all those who glory in the name of Christians, united with us, implore with more insistent supplication for those holy places the gifts of peace, of love and of justice."

He mentioned, among other shrines, the Bethlehem grotto where "the angels, singing the glory of God, announced peace to men of good will."
